Planes Chase Rioting Arabs In Outskirts Of Jerusalem

Soldiers Rout Raiders; Toll Reaches 50 Dead, Hundreds Hurt.

Telegraph, Phone Lines Are Severed

By the United Press.

Jerusalem, May 29.—Airplanes were pressed into service today to subdue rioting Arabs who spread terror and destruction through the Holy Land, leaving in their wake more than 50 dead and hundreds wounded.

Scouting planes flew over nearby hills spotting ambushed Arabs and radioing information of their whereabouts to British troops and police, who dispersed them with gunfire and tear gas.

An unknown number of Arabs, who attacked the military patrol along the Southern Railway near Jaffa last night, were wounded when troops opened fire.

Several others were wounded in a pitched battle with troops guarding the postoffice at Ramleh. The Arabs threw bombs and fired several volleys.

Official's Office Bombed.

Sniping from housetops continued at Jaffa and in other Arab cities. A few additional bombings of public and private buildings also were reported.

Casualties among police and troops were not announced.

Telegraph and telephone lines were cut.

British authorities decided to employ more stringent measures against the insurgents if trouble continues over the week-end.

Three Arabs reportedly were wounded critically when they clashed with troops at Nablus, Arab stronghold. The Arabs were attempting to dynamite a bridge.

Rioters strewed nails in the roads to impede troop transports.

Former members of three Jewish battalions which participated in Lord Allenby's conquest of Palestine during the World War appealed to the government tonight to allow them to mobilize, saying, "It is our duty to defend the homeland. We do not desire British bloodshed."

Considers Bombardment.

It was understood the government was considering aerial bombardment of the villages in Nablus, after evacuating them.

Martial law was expected in the Nablus, Tulkarem and Jenin districts.

There were no signs of the situation improving immediately. The Arab strike continued as strong as ever, and leaders went about enlisting recruits to the Arab national guard.

Jewish students at the University of Jerusalem also sent a petition to British High Commissioner Gen. A. G. Wauchope asking permission to form a Jewish legion "for the protection of our people, rights and property."

Chaim Weizmann, president of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, sent a letter to Commissioner Wauchope urging Great Britain not to be swayed by Arab violence, but initiate a policy of active and systematic encouragement for development of the Jewish settlement as soon as possible.

The Arab strike was called in protest against Jewish immigration.

Weizmann requested Wauchope to make an immediate "substantial grant" of immigration permits to Jews. He also asked Wauchope to use his influence for increased land grants for Jewish colonization, employment of more Jews on the police force and creation of port facilities to make the Jewish city of Tel Aviv independent of Jaffa, Arab center.

Weizmann also indirectly notified the League of Nations Mandates Commission, now in session at Geneva, that the Arab attacks will not break the Jewish determination to re-establish their homes in Palestine.

Hitler Reviews War Maneuvers Of Reborn Navy

By the Associated Press.

Kiel, Germany, May.—Adolf Hitler reviewed a reborn German navy today in a sea spectacle unrivaled here since maneuvers preliminary to the Battle of Jutland.

Attired in a simple brown uniform which he created for his Nazi Party, Der Reichsfuehrer watched the fleet of more than 100 units from a vantage point 20 miles out in Kiel Bay.

Three vestpocket battleships proudly led the parade. Nineteen submarines, the first since the war, followed. Cruisers, destroyers and speedboats ploughed by in the revitalized Nazi navy demonstration.

Hitler was aboard his private dispatch ship, Grille. Gen. Werner von Blomberg, minister of war, and other Nazi leaders were with him.

An excursion boat, alongside the Grille, contained virtually all cabinet ministers. Thirty other boats, loaded with spectators, witnessed the display.

The submarines and speedboats were new, shown for the first time. They were the first units constructed under the Anglo-German treaty which erased the Versailles Treaty limitations, which restricted the Reich navy to 100,000 tons.

The projected Nazi navy, under the new treaty, is to reach 420,595 tons, or about 35 per cent of the British fleet.

The flagship Admiral Graf Spee, carrying the commander, Admiral Foerster, headed the parade. Earlier several of the units had engaged the veteran target ship Zaeringer in a sham battle.

Hitler was aboard the battleship Deutschland as the rattle and roar of the fleet guns concentrated on the battered Zaeringer.

The "attacker" invaded the bay from the North Sea, operated by radio. It escaped, unshelled, and the guns stopped booming after 15 minutes, when the Zaeringer's radio apparatus refused to function properly.

The three-day celebration began yesterday with preparatory maneuvers in the bay and reached its crest today.

Veterans of the Battle of Jutland—its memory undimmed in their minds—and members of the National Socialist Marine Association journeyed here from all over the Reich for the maneuvers.

Tomorrow is the twentieth anniversary of the battle, the outstanding sea clash of the war. It is known to Germany as the "Skagerrak Victory." The British opinion is that England's navy bottled up the German fleet for the remainder of the war.

Hitler and the other Nazi leaders will dedicate a large memorial shaft tomorrow at Laboe in memory of the German sailors killed during the war. The monument was erected by the Marine Association.

Famed War Flier, Destitute, Buried as Hero in Arlington

Thomas Hewitt, jr., war-time flying hero who died in poverty in a downtown rooming house, was given a soldier's burial yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery.

At the grave were his wife, from whom Hewitt had been estranged for several years, and his 12-year-old son, Thomas M., who knew his father only as a daredevil flyer and had never seen him as he was in recent years—a broken figure, wasted by overindulgence in liquor and unable to stage a "comeback."

As the body that lay unclaimed in the District morgue for three days was lowered into the grave, members of the American Legion who saved him from burial in potter's field bared their heads. With them was Jean Auguste Maigret, an employe in the Department of Agriculture, who taught Hewitt how to fly in France, and Maj. Norbert Champsaur, the French air attache to this country.

A member of the famed Lafayette Escadrille and holder of numerous French decorations for bravery during the war, Hewitt was honored in death by the French government with a guard of honor.

Utility Firms File Injunction Against TVA

Call Act Unconstitutional, Ask Alabama Bench to Block Program.

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., May 29.—A new legal assault on the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority was launched by 19 public utility operating companies in the United States District Court for Northern Alabama today.

The 19 companies, members of large holding company groups, asked the court to enjoin the TVA from further operation on the ground that the Tennessee Valley act and the program of the authority violated the Constitution on several points.

It was announced that substantially the same group of companies at the same time were filing a similar bill of complaint in the State chancery court at Knoxville, Tenn.

The complainant companies were largely subsidiaries of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, Electric Bond & Share Co., Cities Service Co., and Associated Gas & Electric Co. They represented virtually all of the principal power generating companies in the Tennessee Valley area.

Naming as defendants Arthur E. Morgan, Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal, constituting the Tennessee Valley Authority, the bill charges the authority "sometime in 1933 promulgated a plan unlawfully to disrupt the good relations existing between the complainants and their respective customers, to appropriate their respec-

Thomas Offers Basis for Pact On Supply Bill

Proposal Would Exchange Points in D. C. Measure Now Deadlocked.

A final effort to effect a compromise upon the 1937 District supply bill in accordance with the wish expressed yesterday by President Roosevelt, will be made on Monday by Senate conferees before sponsoring a continuing resolution.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, late yesterday released a copy of a letter he had sent Representative Thomas L. Blanton, chairman of the House managers, suggesting a basis of agreement.

As the House conferees have shown no indication of changing their adamant attitude, however, the parley is expected to lead only to a decision to sign a formal disagreement.

Thomas' plan of compromise, hitherto suggested informally, rests on House acceptance of the $5,700,000 Federal lump-sum payment for the next fiscal year and the authorization for the President to name a commission of three to determine Federal-District fiscal relations for future years.

No Objection.

The Senators, in exchange, would accept the two other House amendments upon which the conferees have been instructed to stand firm though they might bargain for modifications.

President Roosevelt stated at his press conference that he has no objection if Congress wants a fiscal relations commission set up, but he pointed out that past investigations by tax experts have failed to prevent the annual dispute between the Senate and the House.

He also made it clear that he wants the District bill passed, if pos-

Engineer's Death Fails to Stop Train

San Francisco, May 29 (AP).—Unmanned, the second of two locomotives pulling half a hundred passengers westward roared along for nearly 30 miles today before the death of its engineer was learned.

The second engine—in which a bursting steam pipe caused the death of the engineer and stunned the fireman—had no part in controlling the train merely adding power. There was no danger to the passengers of the eight-car train.

At a crossing north of Sacramento, Fireman Harry Main on Engine No. 2 of the Western Pacific Limited, regained consciousness and shouted to the crew in the lead engine.

Backing two miles to Del Paso, the crew notified the dispatcher. A search was started which resulted in finding the body of Engineer O. M. Juillerat near Arboga. It was presumed he had jumped when the pipe burst.

Capital Pays Honor Today To War Dead

Gen. Pershing to Speak at Arlington; Roosevelt Will Place Wreath.

Six G.A.R. Veterans Will Take Part in Parade This Morning.

America today honors those who fought its battles.

With President Roosevelt in attendance, but listening to the oratory instead of joining in it, the principal Memorial Day exercises will be held in Arlington National Cemetery at 1 p. m. They will be under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic.

At the turn of the century, 1,500 of the "Boys in Blue" were enrolled in the local department of the G. A. R. Today only 13 remain, and of these only six will be able to visit Arlington today.

Pershing to Speak.

Gen. John J. Pershing, who led the grandsons of these men to France, will deliver the oration of the day at Arlington. He is now past 70.

The Memorial Day observance begins with a parade on Constitution avenue, scheduled to move at 10 a. m. Six G. A. R. survivors will take part in this, riding in three limousines. They are:

The seven remaining members of the Kit Carson Post, the only one left in the Department of the Potomac of the G. A. R., are Newton Charles, 89, of 459 Luray place northwest; Maj. Gen. John L. Clem, 86, the "Drummer Boy of Chickamauga," now living in San Antonio, Tex.; Henry A. Evans, 97, of 736 Twelfth street southeast; Henry L. McCammon, 90, now living in Los Angeles; Eugene W. Weaver, 91, of the Burlington Hotel; Albert A. Woodworth, 89, now living in Norfolk, Va.; Frank J. Young, 89, of 1457 Chapin street northwest.

President Roosevelt announced he will attend this afternoon's services in Arlington at a press conference yesterday. He will make no address.

Immediately after the service the President will go to Annapolis to witness a water pageant staged by midshipmen at the United States Naval Academy. The spectacle will depict Stephen Decatur's recapture of the frigate Philadelphia from pirates in the Bay of Tripoli in 1804.

Route of Parade.

The parade, which, like the Arlington services, is arranged by the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation, will assemble at 9:30 a. m. on Pennsylvania avenue northwest, between Seventh and Ninth streets, and will move west on Pennsylvania avenue to Fifteenth street, south on Fifteenth to Constitution avenue, thence west to Seventeenth. In the line of march will be bands of the National Guard, the Army, the Navy and the United States Marines. There will be regular and reserve troops marching. Included also will be the three winning high school cadet companies and their bands. Other units will be made up of civic and patriotic society members.

The reviewing stand, in which will sit high Government officials and military officers, will be between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, on Constitution avenue.

Col. John W. Oehmann, commandant of the District of Columbia National Guard, will be parade marshal.

Detailed plans for the amphitheater service, announced yesterday, call for assembly at 1 p. m. Department Commander Kline, of G. A. R., will give the call to order, and will present colors. James G. Yaden, president of the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation, will then be introduced as presiding officer.

The Rev. William M. LaRoche, department chaplain, United States Spanish War Veterans, will give the invocation, and Dorothy Reddish will sing the National Anthem.

Gen. Pershing will then give his Memorial Day address.

Mother, 45, Hangs 2 Children, Self

Dunkirk, N. Y., May 29 (AP).—A widowed mother, "tired of the battle of life," hanged her two little children from a single bedpost today and then hanged herself. Chief of Police John J. Warren said.

A stepson found the children's bodies, half reclining on a bed, strips of oilcloth tightly drawn about their throats. The mother's body lay in a corner of the room, the end of a broken noose made from a strip of bedquilt about her throat. The noose had been fastened to a crib and her weight had broken it.

The mother was Mrs. Elizabeth Higgins, 45; the children, Patricia, 7, and Richard, 6. The children were in their night clothes, and coroner George Blood said he believed the mother killed them this morning shortly after the stepson, Joseph H. Higgins, 35, left the house for work.

The stepson, who helped support the family since the father's death about three years ago, said his mother had been ill almost a year.

Reporter Cut; Zioncheck Ousts Owner

Policemen Called to Halt Fight; Representative Tosses Glass.

Mrs. Marion A. Zioncheck early this morning threw Mrs. Benjamin Scott Young, the Zioncheck's landlady, out of their Harvard Hall apartment, precipitating a row which resulted in the stabbing of a newspaperman.

Mrs. Young and Mrs. Zioncheck had been maintaining joint possession of the apartment, which Mrs. Young sublet to the Representative from Washington last Christmas and which she wishes to regain because of the Representative's treatment of her furniture and possessions.

After Mrs. Young had been thrown bodily from the apartment by the Representative's bride, a group of persons who had gathered in the hall attempted to take a camera away from a news photographer who had snapped the struggle between the two women.

Police Are Called.

In the melee that followed the representative of a press association was stabbed in the arm. He was not seriously hurt. Police were called and at an early hour this morning five were in the Zioncheck apartment with newspaperman, the Representative and his wif and member of the apartment house staff.

When Zioncheck returned from his adventures in Pittsburgh, where he went to make a speech, he found Mrs. Young and his wife both in possession of the disputed premises. There were no immediate difficulties. In fact the Representative succeeded in amusing Mrs. Young by demonstrating how one of his turtles tap danced while he sang "I Can't Give You Anything But Love Baby."

A little later the couple and their besieging guest prepared for bed. It was then that Mrs. Zioncheck learned that her husband had telephoned her from Pittsburgh. She never had received the call.

Accused of Hoax.

The Representative told her that he believed that he had talked with her. Mrrs. Zioncheck then accused Mrs. Young of answering the phone and impersonating her to her husband. Mrs. Ioncheck told Mrs. Young to get out.

At the time, Mrs. Young was lying on the davenport in the living room. Mrs. Zioncheck grappled with her and succeeded in putting her out of the door. Zioncheck picked up Mrs. Young's shoes, which had come off in the excitement, and threw them out into the corridor.

Mrs. Young lay on the floor of the corridor screaming and saying that her leg was injured. It was at this time that several persons attempted to break the photographer's camera and that the reporter was cut.

In the meantime, police had been called and two radio scout cars of the Tenth Precinct were dispatched to the apartment. When the officers arrived Mrs. Young still was lying on the floor of the hall. The officers went into the Zioncheck apartment.

In a few minutes, Mrs. Young was lifted to her feet by a newspaperman and she went back into the apartment through the kitchen door. The police, the Zioncheks and their attorney, L. Q. C. Lamar, and Mrs. Young were closeted in the kitchen for a few minutes.

The voice of Lamar could be heard asking Mrs. Young:

"Did you or did you not receive $1,080 from Mr. Zioncheck for the rent of this apartment until October."

Then this private session was broken up and newspapermen were again allowed in the apartment. It was at this time that Zioncheck learned that a reporter had been injured.

The Representative ran into the hall, he had been in barefeet and black pajamas during the affair, and sought out a man who he accused of stabbing the reporter. Police succeeded in stopping him before there were any fisticuffs.

After considerable parleying this part of the difficulties seemed to be smoothed over, but not for long. Zioncheck grabbed a cocktail glass

Black Loses Fight for Higher Profits Levy; Principle Retained.

Scaled Corporate Imposts Approved

Adjournment on June 6 Dubious as New Deal Continues Battle.

By Robert C. Albright.

Slapping a 1 per cent increase on upper-bracket surtax incomes to meet revenue demands of the President, the Senate Finance Committee yesterday rejected a last-minute Administration attempt to raise corporate profit taxes, then chorused approval of their completed bill.

It was a clean-cut defeat for the Administration, which will carry its fight for steep undivided profits taxation to the Senate floor and to conference, presenting a new adjournment barrier. The bill ordered reported by the committee carried barely the principle of corporate tax "reform" urged by the President—an added tax of 7 per cent on undivided corporate earnings, compared with the 42½ per cent maximum voted by the House.

Due to a rift with the Treasury over estimates, forecasts of the Senate bill's yield ranged all the way from $702,000,000 to $789,000,000, contrasted with the $803,000,000 claimed for the House bill. Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, acting chairman during the illness of Senator Pat Harrison, insisted the Senate measure would raise the higher amount because of an alleged $87,000,000 "underestimate" by the Treasury.

Graduated Rates Imposed.

Before approving the completed bill, the committee further modified the 18 per cent flat corporate income tax it had previously voted, by imposing graduated rates running from 15½ per cent to 18 per cent, a 3 per cent increase over the present 12½ to 15 per cent range. To offset this moderation, the group voted to eliminate the $1,000 flat tax exemption it had previously voted companies earning $15,000 and less.

The Administration's last futile stand in the committee was made by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), of Alabama, who offered as a substitute for the committee plan a proposal to retain the capital stock, excess profits and existing corporation income taxes, exempt the first 30 per cent of undivided profits from surtax, but impose added rates ranging to 30 per cent where more than half of a corporation's profits were withheld from stockholders.

The Black plan would have raised only $485,000,000, and the committee promptly voted it down by a wide majority. There was a dispute over whether this vote was 13 to 6, or 12 to 5, due to confusion over proxies. The majority claimed the vote of Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and the minority, the vote of Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas. Both were absent, and in each case their proxies were challenged.

Black to Dissent.

It was learned that Black plans to offer a minority report dissenting from the committee's action, and that Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, recently chosen "keynoter" for the Democratic National Convention, who has fought persistently for the President's corporate tax reform, reserved the right to offer amendments from the Senate floor.

Although the committee bluntly refused to yield to the President on his corporate tax recommendations, it gleaned another $50,000,000 toward his revenue objectives by reaching into the individual income surtax brackets, starting at $6,000, by rasing rates 1 per cent all the way up the line to $50,000.

Thus the rate on the individual surtax bracket from $6,000 to $8,000 would be raised from 5 to 6 per cent, collecting from individuals in this group a $200 surtax, instead of $180 as under the present law. In the high $46,000 to $50,000 surtax bracket this 1 per cent step-up in taxes would increase the rate from 27 to 28 per cent, and produce $8,140, instead of $7,700. In still higher surtax brackets, $440 would be added to the existing surtax.

In hiking surtax rates—a conces-

Hoover Accepts Rally Bid; Sets June 10 for Visit

Leaders Hail Decision, Ask for Speech; Hamilton to Name Landon.

By the Associated Press.

Fast-shaping arrangements for the Republican National Convention yesterday brought an assurance that Herbert Hoover would attend, and drew a suggestion from the Landon camp that the former President address the conclave.

"I have been urged by the Republican National Committee through its officials in Washington and Chicago to attend the convention at Cleveland," Hoover said in a statement issued at his home in Palo Alto, Calif.

"I have accepted and will attend on Wednesday, June 10, the second day of the convention."

Almost simultaneously, John D. M. Hamilton, national organizer for a group backing Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for the nomination, said in a statement that the convention would welcome a speech by Hoover.

Move Pleases Landon Aid.

"It is a proper courtesy to invite Mr. Hoover as the former President and titular head of the party to attend this most important convention," said Hamilton.

"I am impressed with the opportunity which would come to the convention to hear Mr. Hoover and, as a member of the arrangements committee, I shall be pleased to join in recommending that an address by our former President be included in the convention program.

"His coming to Cleveland will be welcomed by both delegates and convention visitors, who will feel it a privilege to have an expression from him regarding the vital issues of this campaign."

Carl Bachmann, head of the Senator-Borah-for-President committee, told reporters there was "nothing to say" about Hoover's appearance.

Welcomed by Knox Leader.

In Chicago Edward A. Hayes, chairman of the Frank-Knox-for-President committee, commended the action of Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, in inviting Hoover and other outstanding leaders to the convention.

"This means that the best minds of the whole party will be present to advise on a militant, forward-

Congress Gets 'Scrip' Proposal To Solve D. C. Jobless Problem

By James D. Secrest.

A revolutionary plan for ending both unemployment and Federal and municipal relief will be tried out in the District if Congress enacts a joint resolution introduced in the House late yesterday by Representative Isabella Greenway (Democrat), of Arizona.

The scheme, if successful in Washington, would be extended throughout the country.

While closely guarded from premature publicity, the plan has been studied for weeks by local merchants and by the District Commissioners. Opinion has been sharply divided upon its practicability.

The basis of the proposal is an "anticipatory revenue certificate," valued at $1, which would be exchanged for either services or merchandise among the participants in the plan in the same manner as users of scrip.

Unlike scrip, however, the certificate would be self-liquidating and could be redeemed at the end of a year for $1 in United States currency, provided a special 2-cent stamp was placed on it each week for 53 weeks.

As explained by Mrs. Greenway, who is ardently interested in solving the unemployment problem, the plan would work thus:

An employer would agree to hire one or more additional employes, up to that point unemployed, and would pay them in certificates of $1 denomination instead of in currency.

The certificates would be issued, under strict regulations, by the District Commissioners or their agent without cost to the employer. If the employe spent the certificates before the date upon which the weekly 2-cent stamp falls due, he would get full value for them.

However, each week that he held them he would have to add a stamp and thus deduct his earnings by 2 per cent.

Ann Harding, Daughter Sail As Bannister Fails in Pursuit

By the Associated Press.

Quebec, May 29.—Ann Harding, blonde screen actress, whose former husband, Harry Bannister, had pursued her here to prevent her leaving for Europe with their 7-year-old daughter, sailed tonight for England.

She and the child, Jane, sailed aboard the liner Duchess of Atholl. Originally passage had been booked for them on the Empress of Australia which does not leave until tomorrow.

Miss Harding was overtaken in Quebec by Bannister, who flew here from Montreal scarcely two hours after she had established herself at the Chateau Frontenac. Secret plans were made when word was received that the actress' former husband was en route, and the party boarded the liner quietly.

Miss Harding arrived here by train from Montreal, closely followed by Bannister who flew there today from Newark, N. J.

The Duchess of Atholl, which sailed from Montreal this morning, was not due to dock here. Miss Harding, her daughter, a nursemaid, an agent and a lawyer all boarded the vessel from a tender in midstream.

Bannister could not be located immediately. He had not registered at the hotel, although he was understood to have gone there early tonight.

"I'm not afraid of Harry Bannister nor of anything he can do," the blonde screen star said in Montreal only a few hours before her former husband, accompanied by a United States lawyer, reached that city, ostensibly bound to prevent her taking their child to England.

With the movie actress was a lawyer, a nurse and Miss Harding's agent. She said she was going to England to fulfill a movie contract and for no other reason.

Bannister—apparently afraid he might never see his child again if his former wife established residence in England—and his lawyer conferred with authorities immediately after their arrival in Montreal and then hurriedly took off for Quebec.

Robinson Move On Canal Fund Slows Aid Bill

Adjournment June 6 Still Aim, Leader Declares; Vote Due Today.

By Felix Bruner.

Action on the $2,370,000,000 deficiency bill, which carries the $1,425,000,000 relief appropriation, was delayed yesterday when the Senate became snarled in an argument over the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing power project.

While still insisting that he is driving for adjournment by June 6, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, caused the delay when he injected the controversy into consideration of the bill. The Senate will disregard the Memorial Day holiday and continue its debate today.

Robinson said he still hoped for adjournment by June 6, or by June 9, the opening date of the Republican convention. He added that if adjournment is not obtained by that time there will be no recess during the convention.

"I have no objection to recessing," he said, "but I have found no demand whatever for it."

Two "Must" Bills.

With passage by the Senate yesterday of the commodity exchange bill, the only "must" legislation remaining were the deficiency bill and the tax bill.

In spite of the fact that both the House and Senate have refused appropriations for Passamaquoddy and the Florida canal, Robinson sought to amend the deficiency bill by tacking on it the Administration resolution calling for appointment of boards to examine into the projects and for appropriations if the boards report favorably.

President Roosevelt would appoint the two boards, each consisting of three engineers. The boards would be instructed to report by July 20. The original resolution called for a report by June 20.

Should the boards report favorably, the President would be authorized to allot, from relief funds, $10,000,000 for the Florida project and $9,000,000 for the tide-harnessing operations in Maine. From previous relief funds $5,000,000 was allotted for the canal and $7,000,000 for the power development, without specific Congressional authorization.

Offers Amendment.

Robinson was attempting to tack his amendment to a committee amendment which provided that none of the funds appropriated in the measure now under consideration could be allotted to a project unless money was available for its completion. This would block both the undertakings covered by the amendment.

Two points of order designed to block the Robinson amendment were voted down by the Senate and a vote on the amendment is expected to be taken today.

The first point of order was raised by Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, chairman of the Appropriations sub-committee which had charge of the bill. He declared that Robinson's amendment violated the rules of the House in that it sought to include legislation in an appropriation bill and that it was not germane to the bill.

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, also attempting to block the move, raised a point of order against the committee amendment limiting allotments to projects that can be finished with available money. This point of order would have had the effect of blocking the Robinson amendment, which amended the committee amendment.

Clark Overruled.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, who was presiding, overruled the Clark point of order. Clark appealed to the Senate and was defeated, 53 to 19. Adams' point of order was overruled, 53 to 21. Both votes were on roll calls. Clark declared this action opened the way for any kind of legislation in the bill and threatened to attempt to amend the measure by including the anti-lynching bill.

Robinson estimated that the canal would cost $150,000,000, and the power project $42,000,000, including money already allotted. He said the legal right of the President to initiate the projects had never been questioned. He said that he hoped for speedy action because delay would endanger or end the jobs of 5,000 men in Florida and 6,000 in Maine.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, insisted that passage of the Robinson resolution would not obligate Congress to appropriate more money in the future. To this point of view Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, who led the fight against the canal, vigorously objected.

"It is absurd," he said, "for Congress to authorize another year's work unless it intends to finish these projects," he said. "This resolution is an authorization and no amount of camouflage or weasel-worded argument will change it."

Asks Separate Votes.

Senator Hale (Republican), Maine, asked that separate votes be taken on Passamaquoddy and the canal. It was indicated that this procedure would be followed. He indicated he was for the power project but against the canal.

Opposition to relief methods of the Administration was expressed in prepared speeches by Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont; Senator Barbour (Republican), New Jersey, and Senator Metcalf (Republican), Rhode Island. Both Austin and Barbour urged adoption of the Vandenberg amandment providing for turning control of relief back to the States.

"As soon as the Government began making outright grants to the States," Barbour said, "and local sources of relief concurrently began to dry up, policies and practices that had once been determined locally came to be dictated by the Federal administrators."

He contended Federally administered work relief was "mesmerizing" in its effect on "the tax consciousness of communities and their citizens."

While the Senate was debating the relief bill, Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, announced that between March 8 and May 16 the number of relief workers had dropped 409,169, with 3,449,146 on the rolls at the end of that period.

Third Party Threats Fade; Leaders No Longer Fear Stampede to Townsend.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN

SOME of the movements, which a few months ago threatened to add confusion to the current American political situation, have, as the battle approaches, faded out. For instance, all talk of a third party this year has disappeared, yet a few months ago that was thought to be a distinct possibility.

Since the first of the year, both Democratic and Republican leaders were greatly disturbed by the threat of Dr. Francis E. Townsend's old-age pension movement. So great was the appeal of the California physician's panacea supposed to be, that it was thought it would cut sharply across party lines—and when the aged doctor said he was thinking of launching a third party movement, provided one of the major parties did not indorse his plan, the leaders shivered.

But it was a false alarm. Not only has the Townsend movement been discredited and demoralized by the House investigation, but it is doubtful whether it ever was the threat which Democratic and Republican party leaders thought it was. For instance, at no time have the Townsendites had more than 100 members of the House on their side—and in the face of an approaching election, House members have been notoriously expedient in their actions.

* * *

Returns from recent political contests in which Townsendism was an issue is evidence that those House members who refused to be stampeded correctly appraised the situation. In California, the home of Townsendism, for instance, the Townsend ticket in the recent primary election made a pitiful showing. In Oregon Senate Republican Floor Leader Charles L. McNary easily won renomination, beating two Townsend candidatess by approximately 4 to 1. And, it must be remembered, the Townsend movement was more deeply intrenched on the Pacific Coast than in any other section.

* * *

Father Charles E. Coughlin, the Detroit radio priest, was counted as another disturbing factor in the situation. His Union for Social Justice has brought low several members of Congress in primary contests. But even the clergyman now denies all plans for a third party movement. He does not like President Roosevelt, and would like to turn to the Republicans if they meet his ideas of what a Presidential candidate should be.

But even Father Coughlin Knows that the Republicans, whatever their shortcomings may be, will not be so foolhardy as to embrace the vague and crackpot ideas which he espouses. So the priest asserts that he will worry along as an independent until 1940, when he hopes to be able to accomplish some of his objectives.

* * *

Another third party threat was expected to come from the disaffected Democrats. At one time it looked like there might be a repetition of 1896, when the gold-standard Democrats, bolting William Jennings Bryan, launched a ticket of their own. The possibility seemed very real immediately after Al Smith's speech before the American Liberty League dinner.

But where are the leaders for such a movement? Albert C. Ritchie is dead. Huey P. Long is gone and the Louisiana Democratic machine is trying to ingratiate itself with the Administration and let bygones be bygones. Former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts in disgust has retired from the field. Lewis Douglas is concentrating on business affairs. Former Senator James A. Reed is still caustically and critically assailing the New Deal, but his age is too great a handicap to lead a real revolt. Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia turned out to be a buffoon, instead of a political strategist. James P. Warburg, an effective publicist, however, is an ineffective politician. Senators Carter Glass, Harry F. Byrd and Millard E. Tydings have each indicated their decision to remain within the Democratic party.

Of those in open revolt, only one, Al Smith, has even a chance of setting foot on the floor of the Democratic National Convention. And it is understood that he has decided not to attend. He can hardly be blamed. He would be one of the loneliest persons in the world in that huge Philadelphia hall. If he attempted to speak, he undoubtedly would be booed down by the Roosevelt partisans.

Of course, there will be many uncertainties in the coming campaign. But it now looks like they will be colorless and not very spectacular. Many conservative Democrats will bolt their party, but there will be no organized mass movement in that direction. Many left-wing Republicans will support Mr. Roosevelt, but the only figure left who could make big news out of such an announcement is Senator William E. Borah.

What he will do eventually is not clear, except that he will not start any third parties. Many observers believe that Senator Borah will return to Idaho after the Cleveland convention and start running openly for re-election to the Senate. Some think he has been doing that for the last six months—that every move he has made on the national political stage has been primarily for the purpose of increasing his prestige and prospects at home against the popular Democratic Governor of Idaho, Ben Ross.

The chances that Senator Borah will openly bolt the Republican Party become more remote as the convention nears. Unless he is willing to retire from the Senate, the Lion of Idaho cannot afford to leave the Republican Party this year. If he does, his defeat for re-election would be assured—since the Republicans of his State would undoubtedly bolt him, as he would be the party standard bearer.

looking platform and upon a liberal, progressive fighting candidate to carry the campaign against the New Deal autocracy."

Harrison E. Spangler, director of the Western headquarters of the Republican National Committee at Chicago, termed "splendid news" the word that Hoover would attend the convention.

Counsel of Great Benefit.

"His wisdom and counsel will be of great benefit to the men and women who will meet there in this, the most important gathering of Republicans since the Civil War," he said.

Gov. Landon meanwhile announced yesterday that Hamilton would make the nomination speech. He said he did not know who would make the seconding speeches. Hamilton declined comment on the announcement.

Bachmann said the speaker to nominate Borah had not yet been selected.

Meanwhile Chairman Fletcher announced that the national committee was winding up its pre-convention headquarters activities with a statement on convention plans and the release of three campaign pamphlets.

The pamphlets were entitled "And Nero Fiddled," "Women and the Coming Election" and "American Institutions." The committee described them as dealing with inflation, the attitude of women toward the New Deal, and the Roosevelt Administration's record.

Fletcher said that former Vice President Charles G. Dawes, who already is a delegate to the convention; all Republican Governors and Congressmen, national committee members and former national committee officers had been invited to take platform seats at the convention. Most of them, he said, had accepted.

He also spoke of the arrangements committee meeting in Cleveland Tuesday, and said the full national committee would start hearings on contests for seats the following day.

Fletcher concluded his statement by saying the terms of the present committeemen and women would expire with the election of the new committee at the convention, and that he was not a candidate for re-election to the chairmanship.

Both Hamilton and Bachmann said they would leave Washington this week-end to set up Cleveland headquarters for their candidates.

Lowden Discusses Farm Plank.

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—Former Gov. Frank O. Lowden believes a State-administered soil conservation plan such as he has espoused for some years "should be the basis" of the Republican farm plank this year, he said today.

Former President Herbert Hoover, Harrison E. Spangler, director of the G. O. P.'s Western headquarters, and Frank Knox, Chicago Presidential candidate, all have proposed that Lowden write the plank.

To this, the white-haired Republican elder statesman said:

"That's up to the resolutions committee, isn't it? Of course, I'd be glad to give any advice I could."

Except for his comment on the farm plank, he declined to express any political opinions, explaining he felt he had been completely out of touch.

"Do you plan to attend the convention in any capacity?" he was asked. Lowden replied:

"No. It was suggested to me, while I was in Europe, that I might be a delegate at large from Illinois, but I indicated I didn't care to. I've been attending conventions for many years, and they've lost their novelty."

Chicago Trolley System Sold for 1-5 Book Value

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—The city's entire street car system, one of the largest in the country with a book value of over $165,000,000, was bid in by agents of a reorganization committee today at an auction sale for $33,100,000.

The purchasers, Vice President Frank Gordon of the First National Bank and Vice President M. H. MacLean of the Harris Trust & Savings Bank, representing, they said, first mortgage bondholders and other invsetors, were the only bidders qualified under orders laid down by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson. The properties, comprising the holdings of several individual companies, have been in receivership in his court for nearly ten years.

Cleveland Seats For Spectators To Be Limited

G. O. P. Convention Aid Reports Only 3,560 Tickets Left.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 29.—Casual spectators at the Republican National Convention will constitute a small minority, Ralph Williams, of Oreg., national committeeman in charge of arrangements, said today in disclosing ticket reservations for the political "big show."

Seats available in Cleveland's public hall will total 14,218, Williams said. Tickets for 10,558 already have been apportioned, he explained on the following basis:

Delegates and alternates	2,006
Press reservations	956
Extra to State delegations	6,000
Cleveland convention committee	1,000
Presidential candidates (20 each)	160
Diplomatic Corps (estimate)	150
G. O. P. National Committeemen	106
Members of Congress	104
United States Senators	46
Former chairmen of National Committee	12
Former secretaries of National Committee	6
Governors of States	8
Former Presidents' widows	4
Total	10,558

This leaves a balance of 3,560 seats, many of which, Williams said, may be apportioned among young Republican clubs and women's Republican organizations.

The widows of former Presidents, all of whom have announced their intention to attend, are Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Howard Taft and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge.

Williams asserted that the 6,000 seats over which State delegations have control and the 1,000 tickets assigned the local convention committee represent accommodations for the public.

"If John Doe asks me about tickets," he observed, "I can only refer him to his State delegation."

Williams said that the seating arrangement for delegates and alternates, to offset possible complaints against choice space being allotted larger delegations, is to be on a geographical basis.

The seats are to be in four sections. Atlantic Coast States will occupy one outstanding bloc and Pacific Coast States the other, with Midwest and Southern State contingents in the center sections.

Maine delegates will occupy the front rows of its section, followed by other New England States "and down the coast," Williams said. Washington will lead off the West Coast section. Front seats in the center will be occupied by Michigan and Minnesota.

Guild Executive Board Urges A.F.L. Affiliation

New York, May 29 (AP).—The executive board of the American Newspaper Guild recommended in its annual report today that the guild make application to the American Federation of Labor for a charter signifying affiliation with the federation.

Garland Ashcraft, national treasurer, reported the guild had grown during the past year from an organization of 3,550 members in good standing to 5,716.

At the opening session this morning, the delegates were welcomed to the city by Mayor F. H. La Guardia.

Crops Control U. S. Necessity, Davis Declares

AAA Administrator Calls Soil Conservation Best; Sees Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Because of international trade conditions, Chester C. Davis, administrator of AAA, said yesterday he believed crop production control in this country is necessary to prevent agriculture from "hitting another tailspin."

Whether the present soil conservation program will solve the problem remains to be seen, said the administrator, just back from a two-month tour abroad.

"The soil conservation program is the best way out under the existing interpretation of the Constitution," he added, "but the problem is there. If this doesn't meet it, I'm sure the genius of the American people will find a way out."

He conferred with President Roosevelt and shortly afterward told newsmen of his investigations in 11 European countries.

He said he did not expect to resume active administration of the AAA at this time, but would "make a swing about the country" to look over the soil conservation program and discuss things with the farmers themselves.

The administrator expressed the belief that a freer international trade might be developed over a long period, and that reciprocal trade agreements were paving the way. He said suggestions were made to him for an international economic conference, dealing largely with agricultural problems.

"I came back with a very definite conviction that if the United States is to continue to live in this world of nations, it must find a way to deal with agriculture as a national problem. Without some concerted effort on the part of farmers, to adjust themselves to changing conditions, another tailspin is inevitable."

Townsend Data Placed Before District Court

Members of House Cheer as Plan Founder Is Called 'Faker.'

The citation of Dr. Francis E. Townsend and two of his aids for contempt of the House of Representatives went into the legal hopper of the District Supreme Court yesterday, with every prospect that the pension-plan apostle would not be tried until fall.

The certification of the action of the House, signed by Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, was delivered to District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett yesterday, together with all records and documents in the case, and a reveiew of the refusal of Dr. Townsend, the Rev. Clinton Wunder and John B. Kiefer, his assistants, to testify before a special House committee.

Calendar Is Crowded.

Garnett said yesterday that although the grand jury is now sitting, its crowded calendar indicates there is little possibility of bringing the case to trial before fall.

In the House several members who must fight Townsend organizations in their districts in the elections this year expressed a hope the case would be tried sooner. Some of these indicated they would use material obtained by the committee headed by Representative C. Jasper Bell (Democrat), Missouri, against the Townsendites.

Garnett added later that his office probably would supplement the committee's investigation with a little private work of its own.

Sheridan Downey, Townsend's attorney, left last night by plane for Chicago and California, defying the committee to make him testify.

Will Meet Monday.

The committee plans to meet Monday to question Charles M. Hawks, Boston manager of the Townsend scheme to provide all persons over 60 with $200 a month from the Government.

Hawks, 61-year-old father of Capt. Frank Hawks, speed flier, resigned yesterday in Boston as head of the movement there, according to the United Press, and said he would be in Washington Monday prepared to testify.

During the day, he said Dr. Townsend telephoned him that "the strategy we have adopted is to disobey the subpenas and sit tight."

"I told him I would think it over," Hawks said. "When I did, I wired my resignation as State manager, effective at 5 o'clock tonight."

Explaining his action, he said "but that doesn't mean I've turned against the plan. I believe in it clear through to the core. They haven't produced anything at the inquiry to change my mind about it."

"However," he added, "my country always comes first. I love it and I consider it my duty as a citizen to answer a Federal subpena."

In the House yesterday members cheered when Representative Young (Democrat), Ohio, took the floor to attack the Townsend group. He said Dr. Townsend "is a charlatan, a faker, a racketeer and a fraud." He added:

"Conscienceless agitators and demagogic politicians may thrive momentarily by espousing this phantasmagoric plan claiming to give $200 a month to every elderly individual, but their ascendancy will be brief and their downfall sudden and certain."

Highlights of Taxes Now Before Senate

Following are the highlights of the compromise tax bill ordered reported yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee:

Graduated rates ranging from 13½ to 18 per cent on corporation income, estimated to yield $215,000,000.

Additional tax of 7 per cent on undivided corporate profits, estimated to produce $225,000,000.

Extension of 4 per cent normal income tax to dividends received by shareholders, $90,000,000.

Elimination of House "cushion" rates for financially weak corporations, $5,000,000.

Continuation of capital stock and excess profits taxes, salvaging $168,000,000 in revenue the President asked be repealed.

Special provisions to encourage liquidation of personal holding companies, $33,000,000 new revenue.

Imposition of corporation income taxes on banks and insurance companies, but exemption from 7 per cent tax on undivided profits.

Strengthening of administrative provisions calculated to prevent "unreasonable" retention of corporate earnings, revenue uncertain.

Increase of 1 per cent in surtax rates on individual upper bracket incomes ranging from $6,000 to $50,000, and flat $440 increase in surtaxes on incomes of over $50,000; estimated revenue, $50,000,000.

Import taxes on certain fish and vegetable oils; increased revenue, $10,000,000.

"Windfall" tax of 80 per cent on refunded or unpaid AAA processing taxes, $82,000,000 new revenue.

Tax Bill

sion to the views of Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin—the committee left untouched the politically volatile normal income tax rate of 4 per cent, despite the rich revenue field it offers. Suggestions toward a similar increase in the lower income brackets several weeks ago produced an immediately unfavorable reaction in party ranks, where taxing the low-income multitudes is considered poor election medicine.

It was significant that the lowest surtax bracket, lying between $4,000 and $6,000, also was left unscathed.

The swift committee wind-up in consideration of the bill came as the immediate result of a caucus Thursday of committee Democrats, who were prodded by Administration leaders to act immediately so that June 6 adjournment plans might not be needlessly impeded. The Senate drive for adjournment next Saturday is still on, but there is wide skepticism that the goal will be reached.

The measure approved by the Senate Finance Committee yesterday represented a victory for Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, and Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, who led the committee fight on corporate tax revision, but they gave no signs of elation.

"The best that can be said of the tax bill as reported," said Byrd, "is that it is infinitely less harmful than the House bill or the other substitutes offered. If we continue to spend hugh sums in excess of the current revenue we must continue to increase taxes. What we should do is to reduce expenditures and avoid the necessity of new tax burdens, but any tax legislation adopted should be maturely and carefully considered."

Changes Numerous.

A number of last-minute tax changes were made in the Senate measure before it was ordered reported. To avoid further penalyzing of personal holding companies, income of which already is taxed under the present law at rates ranging from 20 to 60 per cent, the committee voted to reduce this tax in each bracket by 7 per cent—to offset the new 7 per cent surtax on undivided profits.

This personal holding company section had been stricken from the bill altogether by the House, which had substituted a more drastic holding company section of its own, making such concerns fully subject to high undivided profits taxes even if they declared all of their earnings out in dividends to a parent company. The Senate committee threw this provision out of the bill. It also exempted small-loan concerns from the effect of the present personal holding company law.

Preferential tax treatment was provided for prospectors who sell gas and oil wells they have discovered, by limiting the tax on income from this source to 30 per cent. It was argued that present tax rates serve to discourage the business of prospecting for new oil reserves.

The new graduated corporation income tax voted by the committee, in lieu of the flat 18 per cent tax previously decided upon, ranges as follows:

Tax	Corporate Income
15½ per cent	first $2,000
16 per cent	next 13,000
17 per cent	next 25,000
18 per cent balance over	40,000

Aid to Smaller Firms.

This graduation of rates was designed to ease the effect of the tax on small income corporations, and was accepted as preferable to the $1,000 flat exemption for companies earning less than $15,000, which had been tentatively placed in the Senate bill.

No Vote on Report.

On the motion to report the committee bill there was no record vote, but the ballot rejecting the Black undivided profits tax schedules was the real test, and once that was out of the way, approval of the completed bill was perfunctory.

Senators voting against Black's Administration substitute were Bailey, of North Carolina; Byrd, of Virginia; George, of Georgia; Gerry, of Rhode Island; King, of Utah; Lonergan, of Connecticut, and Walsh, of Massachusetts (Democrats); and Couzens, of Michigan; Capper, of Kansas; Hastings, of Delaware; Keyes, of New Hampshire, and Metcalf, of Rhode Island (Republicans).

Voting for the Black substitute were Barkley, of Kentucky; Black, Costigan, of Colorado, and Guffey, of Pennsylvania (Democrats), and La Follette, of Wisconsin (Progressive).

Whether Clark's proxy would be also counted with the "noes" and Connally's proxy vote, with the "ayes," was a miter of controversy last night.

Possibility of a protracted conference fight to adjust differences between House and Senate tax measures was indicated last night by Speaker Byrns, who predicted the House would not accept the "compromise" bill reported by the Senate committee. Byrns was skeptical of plans to adjourn next Saturday, and reiterated the likelihood of three-day recesses during the Republican National Convention, starting June 9. Senate Majority Leader Robinson, aiming at a June 6 getaway, forecast adjournment by June 9 at latest.

California Trip Believed Likely For President

Goes to Annapolis Today for Naval Review and Week-end Cruise.

By the Associated Press.

Plans for the first of a series of trips likely to take President Roosevelt to the West Coast and perhaps into eastern Canada before the November elections were virtually completed yesterday at the White House.

Today the President sets out on a brief forerunner to the longer tours when he journeys to Annapolis to review a naval pageant. From there he will sail on a week-end cruise aboard the Presidential yacht Potomac, returning to the Capital tomorrow evening.

The first of the probable series of long trips has been scheduled to start June 8 with a swing through Arkansas, Texas, Indiana and Kentucky.

To Talk on History.

He will deliver addresses on what he has described as historical subjects in Little Rock, Ark.; Dallas, Tex., and Vincennes, Ind., and visit the Lincoln Shrine at Hodgenville, Ky., June 14, before returning to the White House the following day.

With Democratic leaders regarding his nomination for a second term as a foregone conclusion, White House callers in the last few days have come away with the impression that a campaign trip to California, with speeches en route, is almost a certainty.

Mayor Shaw of Los Angeles said on Thursday the President told him he might visit California in the late summer or early fall. Gov. Davey of Ohio, after a chat with the President yesterday, said it was likely the President would speak in Ohio in August.

May Go to Campobello.

Before the political campaign gets into full stride, the Executive also may take a boat trip to the family summer home on Campobello Island, in Canadian territory opposite Eastport, Me., in July or August. Sailing, one of his favorite sports, would be on that recreational schedule.

The June 8 trip schedule, unless changed, will include speeches at the Arkansas centennial at Little Rock, June 10; at the Texas centennial at Dallas, two days later, and at the memorial to George Rogers Clark, Revolutionary War hero of the Northwest, at Vincennes, Ind., June 14.

Short extemporaneous addresses were said to be likely at Houston, San Antonio and Austin, Tex., June 11; at Denison, Tex., June 13.

Firms Challenge TVA's Power

tive markets, to invade and destroy the property, business and business relationships of the complainants."

It further alleges that the TVA "unlawfully conspired together with the Federal Administration of Public Works, its officers and agents * * * to take unlawfully from the complainants their businesses, rights and properties."

The various charges enumerated in the bill challenge the validity of almost the entire sweep of TVA activities, and in the opinion of legal experts strike at the base of the whole power program of the Roosevelt Administration.

Other "Yardstick" Properties.

The companies hold that in furtherance of its "national power policy" the TVA "is promoting other projects in various parts of the country, to be built, owned and operated by the Federal Government as 'yardsticks' by which to measure the cost of electricity, to regulate intrastate rates and charges for electricity and to promote public ownership of local intrastate electric facilities."

In connection with these allegations the bill mentions the Public Works Administration, the Electric Home and Farm Authority and the Rural Electrification Administration as vehicles for fulfillment of "various phases" of the "national power policy."

The bill also charges that among the intents and purposes of the TVA act is one "to launch the Federal Government upon a competitive commercial enterprise and to draw to the Federal Government the conduct and management of a business having no relation to the powers for which that Government was established."

The TVA program, the companies charge, "has no direct, real or substantial relation to navigation nor any other constitutional function of the Federal Government."

Last February the Supreme Court ruled in a case affecting TVA, but the decision was limited to a phase of its operations which did not involve the question of constitutionality of the act as a whole.

In this decision the court by a vote of 8 to 1 upheld the TVA's right to sell power generated by the Wilson Dam.

The Supreme Court's opinion, delivered by Chief Justice Hughes, was limited to the case before it. "We express no opinion," it said, "as to the validity of such effort (Government operation of local or urban distribution systems), as to the status of any other dam or power development in the Tennessee Valley, whether connected with or apart from the Wilson Dam, or as to the validity of the Tennessee Valley Authority act or of the claims made in the pronouncements and program of the authority apart from the questions we have discussed in relation to the particular provisions of the contract of January 4, 1934, affecting the Alabama Power Co."

Broader Phases.

Following this decision, it was predicted in public utility circles that an effort would be made to bring broader phases of the constitutionality of the TVA before the highest court.

The 19 operating companies participating in the case filed today are:

The TVA yardstick for wholesale electric rates was characterized by the bill of complaint as "dishonest, unfair, unreasonable and confiscatory" as a measure of rates of the complainants "or other privately owned and operated utilities." The companies charged that the yardstick "excludes the cost of the major part of the investment necessary to render the service and exclude necessary operating expenses, which TVA either ignores or recoups from State and Federal taxpayers instead of from rates."

"To effectuate this conspiracy," it said, "the defendants inform owners of properties desired that unless they sell the property at a price arbitrarily fixed by the defendants, either TVA or the municipalities will build a duplicate distribution system or transmission system with Federal funds and by competition, so subsidize with Federal funds as to be completely destructive to competitors not having access to the Federal Treasury, render the property of the 'recalcitrant' utilities valueless except for junk."

Regarding the contention of unreasonable competition from the TVA, the companies declare that they are capable of meeting all present demand for electric power in the Tennessee Valley area, and are "willing and able to supply more facilities when needed."

TVA Director Replies.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 29 (AP).—David E. Lilienthal, power director of the Tennessee Valley Authority, charged 19 operating utility companies with "ganging up" today in attacking constitutionality of the TVA.

Even this action on the part of "the entire electric power monopoly of the United States can not change the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the water power in public streams belongs to the people and that they may use what they own," Lilienthal said in a statement.

"Only yesterday, United States Circuit Judge Sibley squarely upheld the authority of the TVA to sell power in the State of Georgia," Lilienthal's statement said.

"Furthermore, since the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, these lawsuits can not be other than a squandering of the money of stockholders, electricity users and taxpayers. I recommend to these persons, who have to foot the bill for this 'diamond horseshoe' of brilliant counsel, that they ask their family attorneys to read Chief Justice Hughes' opinion and advise them whether these companies are justified in spending the hundreds of thousands of dollars that these suits will cost them."

Details of 1% Surtax Increase in Bill

The following schedule shows how the Finance Committee's 1 per cent increase in individual income surtaxes will affect upper bracket incomes from $6,000 to $50,000. Incomes above $50,000 would bear a flat $440 increase, reflecting accumulated increases in lower brackes.

Income Brackets.	New Surtax.	Present Surtax.
$6,000 to $8,000	6 per cent	5 per cent
$8,000 to $10,000	7 per cent	6 per cent
$10,000 to $12,000	8 per cent	7 per cent
$12,000 to $14,000	9 per cent	8 per cent
$14,000 to $16,000	10 per cent	9 per cent
$16,000 to $18,000	12 per cent	11 per cent
$18,000 to $20,000	14 per cent	13 per cent
$20,000 to $22,000	16 per cent	15 per cent
$22,000 to $26,000	18 per cent	17 per cent
$26,000 to $32,000	20 per cent	19 per cent
$32,000 to $38,000	22 per cent	21 per cent

2 Wilson Case Informers Sent Out of District

Two hoodlums, admitted gunmen and gangsters, who bought their freedom by turning State's evidence against their former pals in the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson, trod uneasy street in some unrevealed city last night, fearful of underworld vengeance as punishment for their wagging.

They were William Henry Cleary, Philadelphia mobster, and Dewey Jenkins, "little shot" who long has operated in the Baltimore rackets.

The pair, freed by the court on two old charges, were banished from the District by police who escorted them out of the city and warned them never to return.

Cleary, who testified against Ernest Myers, at Rockville, and Albert McDermott, alias John (Slim) Dunn and Albert (Bumps) Sutton, in Cumberland the first of this month, and Jenkins, who appeared only against Sutton, were taken out of Washington sometime yesterday by Lieut. Floyd Truscott and Sergt. Earl Hartman.

Charges Dismissed.

Charges against both were nolle prossed before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in District Supreme Court at the request of Assistant District Attorney Samuel Beach.

They had been brought from District Jail, where they had been held since their return from the trials in Cumberland.

It was there Cleary and Jenkins retold the story of how they joined the gang recruited by Sutton to kill Edward (Mickey) McDonald, widely known gambler.

Wilson, a newspaper route carrier, was shot from behind a hedge in front of McDonald's Takoma Park home October 23, 1934, when he paused to deliver a morning paper, and was mistaken for the bookie.

Stay Out of City, Warning.

Locked in their cell at the courthouse, Cleary and Jenkins waited until they were made free men. Then they were turned over to Truscott and Hartman for "safe keeping." The charge dropped against Jenkins was being accessory to the fact in the Union Station robbery several years ago, and that against Cleary was a safe-cracking job, where $900 were jimmied from a stolen safe.

No sooner had the court let them go than Hartman and Truscott took them out of the city.

"Get going, and go somewhere else and stay out of Washington. We don't want another gambling war in this town—another gang killing. Go anywhere you like. We're through with you—but stay away," they were told.

War or Dependence Called China's Fate

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Saturday), May 30.—Yakichiro Suma, Japanese consul general at Nanking, was quoted by the Domei News Agency today as declaring the Sino-Japanese situation is such that "China must choose between dependence on Japan or war with Japan."

Suma's statement, that agency said, was made at Kobe, Japan, on his arrival there en route to Tokyo from Nanking to report to Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita.

The newspaper Asahi quoted Suma as stating:

"It is reported that China is approaching the Soviet and also is harboring designs to carry out some anti-Japanese schemes with an understanding with America and Great Britain.

"Such action would only be explainable by China's ignorance of Japan's real intentions and power. If such reports prove true this trend must be rectified.

"Permanent peace in the Far East is impossible unless China depends upon Japan.

Wife of Maj. Peabody Files Suit for Divorce

Oakland, Calif., May 29 (AP).—Married 20 years, Mrs. Mildred Clark Peabody filed suit for divorce today against Maj. Paul Everton Peabody, U. S. A., attached to the Army General Staff at Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Peabody charged the major had "openly professed his love for another woman," that he frequently embarrassed her with his attentions to other women and told her he no longer loved her.

that accompanied his body from the French Embassy to Arlington.

Only a handful of spectators was at the grave. A brother, James Hewitt, knelt in front of the grave; young Thomas stood alongside with a flag in his hand, and behind him Mrs. Hewitt and members of her family—all united in forgiving Hewitt's lapses in recent years in memory of the greatness of his youth.

Serving as honorary pallbearers were Commander Edward McE. Lewis, Ralph H. Case and Q. A. Campbell, of the National Press Club Post of the American Legion; Nathan Golden, past department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Maj. Stewart Richardson, of the Veterans' Administration.

Hewitt, who was 41, was the twenty-sixth American to enlist in the famed Escadrille. He never recovered completely from a head injury that he received when his plane crashed during a forced landing near Pol, Belgium, and friends attributed many of his subsequent attacks of depression to ill effects of that disaster.

When the United States entered the war he was active in the Victory Loan drive, being credited with raising $4,000,000. He also flew over the German lines and dropped copies of President Wilson's speech declaring war. After the war he enlisted at Fort George Wright in New York, later making tours of the Orient and Mexico.

New Sea Queen Trailing Record Of Normandie

1 Mile Back of 748-Mile 1-Day Mark; Second Stowaway Is Found.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard the Steamship Queen Mary, en route to New York, May 29.—The giant liner Queen Mary, coursing steadily westward through calm seas, ran close behind the French Normandie's record one-day run of 748 miles tonight.

The British contender for transatlantic crossing honors covered 747 nautical miles in a 25-hour-day run, 1 mile behind the French record set from noon to noon, June 1-2, last year.

The Queen Mary's average speed during the one-day trial was 29.76 knots, only slightly slower than the Normandie's one-day average of 29.92 knots.

French Line officials in New York anounced the Normandie's record one-day run actually was 754 miles, set from noon, June 2, to 11:02 a. m., June 3, 1935. This new mark, not previously announced, was recorded in the ship's log at the time and cabled by request today by Commander Rene Pugnet, of the Normandie, the line officials declared.

(While the Queen Mary's run and the previous Normandie run were set in 25-hour days since ship's clocks were set back an hour during the westward voyage, the newly announced Normandie record was made in only 2 minutes more than 24 hours. The average speed of the French ship during the run of 754 miles was announced as 31.37 knots.)

A second stowaway, who said he sought a job in the United States as a laborer, was found. He was Frank Gardner, 41. He was put to work in the pantry.

(A woman stowaway was found between Southampton and Cherbourg and taken off the ship at the French port.)

The Queen Mary's officers still declined to disclose whether they were seeking a speed record for the course from the end of the Cherbourg breakwater to Ambrose Lightship off the New York coast.

One of the factors to be determined, they indicated, is the weather for the remainder of the trip.

State's Witness In Poison Trial Feared Insane

By the Associated Press.

San Antonio, May 29.—A fear of "one whom she knew was going to kill her" resulted today in the filing of a lunacy complaint against comely Grace Brandon, the Government's key witness in the wife-poisoning trial of her admirer, Maj. Charles A. Shepard, six years ago.

She came under official observation when she sought permission to carry a pistol. A small caliber pistol was taken from her and she was booked for carrying the weapon. She did not elaborate on her fear of death.

The lunacy complaint "speaks for itself," said Dr. T. N. Goodson, Bexar County health officer. He indicated a hearing will be held Monday.

"I'm just as sane as anybody," protested Miss Brandon. "But I'm not surprised—I've been expecting this."

While Maj. Shepard, Army physician, was attending the Army Flight Surgeons' School here, he met the tall, attractive stenographer. He was tried at Kansas City, Kans., in December, 1930, on a charge of poisoning his wife at Fort Riley, Kans. The Government accused him of killing her so he would be free to marry Miss Brandon.

Convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment, he won a new trial and was acquitted. Subsequently he retired from the medical corps. Shortly before his second trial he married a wealthy Denver widow.

Senate Unit Votes New Army Planes

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday approved a bill to place the Army's peace time air strength at 2,320 planes, instead of 1,800 as at present.

The bill as passed by the House would have fixed the limit at 4,000 planes. Committeemen said the 2,320 figure was that recommended by every governmental agency that has studied aviation. The bill would allow attainment of the objective at any time within five years.

Hooded Legion Is 'on the Run,' Police Report

Recruiting Agent Quits as Michigan Intensifies Drive on Floggers.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 29.—The Black Legion was reported on the run today before the campaign of extermination set in motion a week ago when the arrest of 13 men on kidnaping and murder charges disclosed the existence of the night riding terrorist society with its dream of a super-government.

Definite information that frightened members were burning the hoods and robes the secret order wore on its nocturnal flogging and arson expeditions was reported by Prosecutor Owen Dudley, of Jackson, a Black Legion stronghold where five men are held on charges of beating a fellow member.

"Twenty-two robes hidden in one house alone have been burned," Dudley said. "The back of the organization here has been broken. I don't believe that any of the Jackson County members have enough nerve left to commit further violence."

"Has Had Enough."

As Dudley was making his announcement, Arthur F. Lupp, admitted Michigan recruiting officer for the whip-wielding band, declared that "I've had enough. I'm through with the Black Legion."

Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald took command of Michigan's war on the black-cloaked brotherhood today while Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea assembled the evidence from a score of States which he hopes will permit the Department of Justice to enter the case.

"You are engaged in a defense of our free government against a group which would impose upon law-abiding citizens a reign of terrorism which stops not even at murder," the Governor said in a letter to Attorney General David H. Crowley.

"This assault upon the rights of free citizens is the more abominable because it seeks to wrap itself in the American flag and to hide its crimes behind the Constitution of the United States," he said. "Every ounce of power and authority vested in the State is at your disposal in the fight on this organized outlawry."

Intervention of the Federal Government was urged in Atlanta, Ga., by Hiram W. Lewis, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, who denied his organization is related in any way to the Black Legion.

The attorney general announced today that the State would take part in the trial of the men held for the "ritual execution" of Charles A. Poole, who "knew too much."

"There is no doubt that the Black Legion is a real threat," he said, "and I intend to go just as far as the law will allow in breaking it up."

Check Woman's Auxiliary.

Detroit, May 29 (U.P.).—Specific complaints against the Black Legion were received today by Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea, who said he would forward them immediately to Attorney General Homer S. Cummings in Washington in an attempt to enlist the aid of Federal agents.

The evidence, it was learned, included charges that business houses were burned, murders committed and that persons who incurred the disfavor of the legion has been driven out of many towns.

Police continued to gather evidence on the activities of the Women's Auxiliary of the Black Legion. Mrs. Grace Lupp, a black-haired 47-year-old housewife, admitted she was an officer of the auxiliary.

"I'm the colonel and proud of it," she said. "The auxiliary was organized two years ago. You know we've got to check the teaching of communism in the schools."

Oliver Hazard La Farge, Son of the Painter, Dies

New York, May 29 (AP).—Oliver Hazard Perry La Farge, former assistant vice president of General Motors Corporation and a son of the late John La Farge, the painter, died today at his home at 66.

La Farge was discouraged by his father from following art as a profession. He prospected for gold and engaged in ranching and real estate operations in the West. Returning to New York from Seattle in 1920, he became an officer of General Motors, from which he resigned a decade later to become vice president of the Irving Investors Management Co.

Two U. S. Firms Close as French Strike Spreads

80,000 Workers Involved as Government Arms Program Is Crippled.

By the United Press.

Paris, May 29.—Nation-wide strikes, crippling the government's armament and munitions program, tonight spread to two American-controlled plants, the Goodrich Tire and Alsthom companies, in addition to several more French concerns.

Fifteen hundred workers laid down their tools at the Goodrich Tire plant and practically all of the 500 employes at the Alsthom factory walked out, forcing owners to close up.

Most of the factories affected, manufacture automobiles and airplanes, but in addition have large armament and munitions contracts.

The government is doing its utmost to start negotiations between workers and owners as the movement threatens to spread into all branches of the armament industry.

The president of the Employers Association informed Minister of Labor Ludovic Oscar Frossard they will not negotiate until the men return to work or at least evacuate the plants, where some of the workers have barricaded themselves inside the factories.

It was reported that the radical Socialists have threatened to bolt the Popular Front governmentwhich will replace Sarraut's government next week if what it describes as "revolutionary tactics" are continued.

Louis Renault, president of France's greatest single industry, reached an agreement with the 34,000 workers at his huge automobile plant, which also is the government's heaviest contractor for manufacture of shells and munitions.

Officials believed a conference to end the strike might be called tomorrow among workers' delegates and employers, providing the workers agree to return to their jobs in the morning. Frossard continued conversations with both sides all day.

At closing time tonight, workers of the important Panhard automobile plant struck and refused to leave the building.

The government announced that at least 80,000 men are on strike, including workers at the Farman, Citroen and Salmson armaments works, the largest in France.

Various reasons have been given for the outbreak, of which there was no warning.

One is that the workers, encouraged by the advent of a Popular Front government, decided not to lose a moment in making demands for improved working conditions even if the movement complicates the delicate situation attending a change of government.

Argentina Asks League to Settle Ethiopian Issue

Seeks Complete Discussion of Sanctions on Italy; Outlines Action.

By the United Press.

Geneva, May 29.—Argentina today moved for a League of Nations showdown with Italy by demanding convocation of an extraordinary session of the Assembly to settle questions arising from Italy's annexation of Ethiopia.

The Argentine delegate, M. Ruiz Guinazu, informed Acting Secretary General Pablo de Azcarate of his government's demand.

1. Complete discussion of anti-Italian sanctions.

2. Settlement of Ethiopia's future position in the League.

3. Open discussion of and adoption of an "official" attitude toward Premier Benito Mussolini's proclamation annexing Ethiopia as a colony.

Guinazu said the Argentine government's formal note would be forwarded to the League next week.

Observers feared Argentina's membership in the League may depend upon drastic action against Mussolini's fait accompli in Ethiopia.

The Assembly consists of all League members and under the covenant has the "power to deal with any matter within the sphere of action of the League or affecting the peace of the world."

The Council, which meets June 16 to study the Italo-Ethiopian problem, consists of 14 members of the Asembly and acts as a supervisory and executive organ.

Argentina's attitude contrasts sharply with that of other Latin and South American countries.

Ecuador has refused to enforce anti-Italian sanctions. Chile demanded abolition of penalties against the Fascist state, and Guatemala resigned from the League.

$300,000 Blaze Sweeps Army Hangar in Kansas

Kansas City, May 29 (AP).—Fire swept the U. S. Army hangar at the Kansas City airport early tonight, causing a loss estimated at $300,000.

Five airplanes were destroyed along with a score of parachutes, and a large supply of parts and equipment.

Work of firemen was made hazardous by exploding bullets. Several cases of 45 automatic ammunition were stored in the structure. No one was reported injured.

Emmett Scanlan, chief of the Kansas City fire prevention bureau, said cause of the fire had not been determined.

Virginian Drowns In Swimming Pool

Jack Robbie, 15, son of Mrs. Ethel Keene Robbie, of Livingston Heights, Va., was drowned yesterday in the swimming pool of the Washington Golf and Country Club in Arlington County.

According to Jack Wright, 21, and Robert Wright, 15, sons of Commander P. T. Wright, U. S. N., retired, who were in the pool at the time, the boy had just swum across the pool and was resting on the side when he slid into the water and sank.

Jack Wright, who is a life guard, and another guard at the pool dove for the boy and pulled him to the surface. For nearly an hour the Arlington rescue squad tried to revive him. An autopsy will be performed this morning to determine the cause of his death.

The Representative's aim was not good. The glass hit Lamar on the back of the neck. The glass cut the back of Lamar's neck.

This ended the excitement, but police and all principals in the affair were together in the apartment at 1:30 a. m.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Young, a writer, went to see Assistant District Attorney George McNeil, and she spent two hours outlining to him the mental anguish and physical discomfort she said the Representative had caused her.

By the time she finished the summary and had been told Police Court was the place to swear out a warrant, it was too late to have the necessary forms filled out. Besides, Mrs. Young didn't have a witness.

She told police officials Zioncheck had "threatened" her in New York. She was informed, however, that the "threatening" would have to occur in Washington to obtain a warrant on that ground.

On Monday, Mrs. Young said she plans to return to the court, armed with a witness, and get a warrant against Zioncheck on charges of "destroying private property."

The battle began Thursday night when Mrs. Young arrived at her apartment from New York. She tried to get Mrs. Zioncheck to leave, but the Representative's bride refused.

Eventually, after charges and counter-charges, both women remained in the apartment. Mrs. Zioncheck scored heavily, however, by retaining the bedstead-less bed for her use. Mrs. Young had to sleep on a davenport.

After her conference with authorities, Mrs. Young returned again to the siege of Harvard Hall.

Mrs. Young and Mrs. Zioncheck were on the best of terms until yesterday morning, when Mrs. Young sought to remove the hall door from its hinges. At one point, Mrs. Zioncheck fainted.

It was last night when Mrs. Young swooned. Witness to this was L. Q. C. Lamar, the Representative's attorney, who said, "Mrs. Young collapsed all of a sudden while discussing the tenant situation."

Lamar summoned a physician, who examined Mrs. Young and said, "She appears to be a sick woman."

While his bride was waging a desperate battle to maintain a roof over her blonde head, Zioncheck himself was riding from Pittsburgh to her assistance.

The Representative left the Smoky City without once having seen his host, Mayor William N. McNair, who invited him to address the Henry George Club.

Although McNair failed to appear at the club luncheon, Zioncheck made his speech anyway. He was accompanied by Ali Baba, a Turkish wrestler with whom he had put on a radio musical act earlier in the day.

When the Congressional bad boy arrived in Pittsburgh at 2:30 a. m. yesterday, he banged on the Mayor's door to arouse him. McNair, a teetotaler, didn't respond, but his wife shouted from a window, "Billie is in bed and I won't get him up."

After a round of night clubs, during which Zioncheck led the band, danced and took over the bar to introduce Pittsburghers to the famed "Zioncheck zipper," the Representative went to the Mayor's office. He had a tussle with Ali Baba there and then took a short nap on the Mayor's desk.

About the time Zioncheck left the city, Mayor McNair finally showed up at his office. He denied any intention of snubbing the Representative, saying he had been "tied up in court."

District Supply Bill

sible, rather than a continuing resolution. The intimation was, however, that the Budget Bureau recommendation on the lump sum be unchanged.

Seantor Thomas, in a lengthy letter to Blanton, called tattention to the peculiar nature of the National Capital and of the direct responsibility upon Congress and the President to govern the city properly.

Recalling the offer of the House conferees to accept all but three of the 87 Senate amendments, providing the Senate recedes on those three, he said:

Considered on Merits.

"Of course, the Senate conferees could not accept the proposal as submitted, because from our viewpoint each separate amendment should be considered on its merits and agreed to or modified as the best interests of the District demand."

The Senate managers, Thomas added, are willing to consider "and agree to some modification" of the amendment which would bar District employes earning $2,400 a year or more from doing outside work for pay.

They also are "willing to consider an adjustment" in the character education funds item "to accomplish, in whole or in part, the end sought by the House provisions." As to the third amendment, he said:

"Relative to amendment No. 1, wherein the Senate proposed to increase the Federal contribution from $2,700,000 to $5,700,000, it appears to the Senate conferees that their amendment is fully sustained by the hearings held by the sub-committee on the said District appropriation bill and it is this amendment—and this amendment alone—that appears to be in unreconcilable disagreement.

"The Senate conferees respect the opinion and position of the honorable House conferees and suggest that there is a divergence of opinion which should be and must be cleared up at the earliest practicable date.

"Inasmuch as this item has given occasion for disagreements in every appropriation bill during recent years, the Senate conferees suggest the advisability of providing a plan whereby a special study of the fiscal relationship of the Federal Government to the District of Columbia may be made and a report submitted for the future guidance, not only of the administrative branch, but, likewise, the legislative branch of the Federal Government.

"To this end we suggest that in the coming conference on Monday, June 1, we agree to a Federal appropriation in the sum as recommended by the President in his budget message, with the provision that a special study shall be made during the present calendar year to the end that Congress may have reliable data upon which to predicate a fair appropriation when the next District bill comes up for consideration and action."

Thomas then inclosed a copy of the proposed resolution under which an economist, an engineer, and a city manager—all nonresidents—be named by the President to make the study and report to the President.

Eastman Urges Rails Be Forced To Pool Traffic

Accuses Lines of Fostering 'Special Privilege' in Grain Leases.

By the Associated Press.

Results of studies in two widely separated fields of railroad activity were made public yesterday by Joseph B. Eastman, who accused the roads of fostering "special privilege" through the leasing of grain elevators and suggested they be forced to pool merchandise traffic.

Eastman, whose job as Federal transportation co-ordinator will expire June 16 unless extended by Congress, asserted inadequate rentals paid by large grain companies for railroad-owned elevators at Chicago, Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha, and Council Bluffs were a carry-over "of the old rebating days."

Unhealthy Conditions.

Declaring this enabled large operators to stamp out the competition of small traders, he said it resulted in "unwholesome and unhealthy grain market conditions."

"Rebates and special rail privileges," Eastman continued, "always benefit the strong at the expense of the weak."

The report on merchandise traffic suggested pooling of such shipments on a national scale to increase efficiency and wipe out waste.

Composed largely of manufactured articles shipped in less than carload lots, this traffic was said by Eastman to have been attracted to other forms of transportation in large quanities.

Pooled Service Urged.

The railroads could improve their service on this traffic, the report said, if it were pooled and collection and delivery service were provided to the patrons' doors.

Saying railroad executives had declined to introduce the pooling plan voluntarily on even a local or regional basis, Eastman added this forced him to the conclusion "that if progress is to be made, some form of compulsion is necessary."

This could be applied either by the Government or the Association of American Railroads, he said.

Eastman described as "without foundation" what he said were the "fears" of railroads that a country-wide pooling arrangement would lead to "nationalization" of the carriers or would jeopardize the competitive interests of individual roads.

Hebrew Group Memorial Rites Held at Temple

Speaking at Memorial Day exercises at the Temple of the Washington Hebrew Congregation last night, the Rev. Dr. Abram Simon asked for "an army of peace" to fight for American institutions and ideals and to perpetuate the memory of those who died for their country.

"Decoration Day," Dr. Simon said, "calls for a patriotism that is not a paroxysm but a principle, persistent, firmly rooted in our national conscience as a loving, throbbing passion for all times and under all conditions.

"The patriotism of our honored dead is a protest against the cupidity of many of our population. I believe that America ought to be one standing army of G-men, soldiers of peace, champions of democracy and defenders of our homes."

The services last night were under the joint sponsorship of the Jewish War Veterans. Taking part were 13 other local patriotic organizations.

In an impressive ceremony, the patriotic societies massed their colors behind the pulpit. Then followed ritual services.

At the conclusion of Dr. Simon's sermon, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld offered Kaddish, the prayer for the dead. Taps were sounded, and then the congregation rose to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner." The services closed with benediction by Dr. Simon.

Utopianists' Boat Shattered Off Cuba

Pinar Del Rio, Cuba, May 29 (AP).—Maurice Allard's hope of establishing a "Utopia" in the Virgin Islands was dashed on the rocks off the north coast of Cuba tonight as the weather-beaten schooner Fleetwood gradually fell to pieces.

The 42-year-old vessel, in distress half a dozen times since it left Tampa several months ago, was considered a hopeless wreck by members of the crew of the Cuban navy gunboat Pinar Del Rio, who were trying to get the little sailing craft off the rocks. Allard and a companion, Ros Dodd, of Detroit, were with the Cuban sailors.

The two started from Puerto Cortez, Cuba, May 20, hoping to reach Miami, after abandoning their plan to go to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. The vessel grounded off Pinar Del Rio.

Oringinally Allard had hoped to establish a colony in the Virgin Islands where "nudism, vegetarianism and religion" would be "tolerated."

29 Pleas Approved On Old-Age Relief

Twenty-nine additional applications for old-age pensions were approved by the Board of Public Welfare at a meeting yesterday. The 29 new cases brought the number to 236 who are receiving old-age aid.

More than 2,900 applications for the old-age aid payments are pending and the full staff of the welfare and relief divisions has been put to work sifting the applications. First checks were sent out more than a month ago. The second checks were sent out this month. Checks for the third month are to be sent out early in June to those who already have been receiving them, plus the new cases added by the board yesterday.

Dr. Frederic W. Perkins was named by the board as its representative on the Council of Social Agencies. The council is composed of representatives of the various private and public welfare agencies.

Col. McMullen Is Ousted After Fee Conviction

War Department Reveals Dismissal Effective on May 8.

Col. Joseph I. McMullen's 40 years of Army service were officially terminated by the War Department yesterday because of his recent conviction on charges of accepting fees to use his influence in obtaining Army support against an increase in the tariff on manganese.

The announcement that McMullen "ceased to be an officer of the Army on May 8" was made in the department's routine daily orders. Officials explained that the section of the Federal criminal code, under which he was tried, made his dismissal mandatory upon conviction. For some time McMullen has been "detached" from his duties in the office of the judge advocate general.

McMullen, who is free under bond pending an appeal of his care, refused to comment yesterday on the War Department's action until after consultation with his lawyer.

"I may have plenty to say after that," he added.

McMullen was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and fined $1,000 in a District of Columbia court after Government witnesses testified that he accepted $1,000 from the Cuban-Manganese Corporation in return for his help in defeating a proposed increase in the tax on manganese imports in 1932.

Before his trial in the District court, he was found guilty by an Army court-martial of accepting two railroad tickets from a dealer in Army surplus goods. He was fined $3,600, to be deducted from his pay, and was reduced to the bottom of the Army's list of colonels.

U. S. Warships Sailing for Visit To Washington

Twenty-nine ships of the United States Fleet, now completing its secret war games in the Pacific, are sailing for Atlantic and Gulf ports, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Two of the vessels, the heavy cruiser Indianapolis and the submarine tender Bushnell are to visit Washington, while other ships are headed for Norfolk, Va., and Annapolis, Md. Some will be overhauled at seaboard navy yards while others are to be used in training cruises for the naval reserve during the summer.

The Indianapolis, flagship of Vice Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, commander of the scouting force, is due to arrive at Hampton Roads Tuesday. Admiral Hepburn is expected to visit the Navy Department here preliminary to taking over his new post as commander in chief of the United States Fleet, and then will continue to Brooklyn Navy Yard for overhauling of the cruiser.

Four destroyers, the Humphrey, King, Sands and Lawrence, are expected in Norfolk June 7, while two other destroyers, the Barney and the Biddle, which already have arrived at Norfolk, are to proceed to Annapolis, where they will be used to train the Naval Academy's midshipmen.

Boosters to Meet On Plan for Trip

Final plans for the twenty-fourth annual booster trip of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association will be made by the trip committee tomorrow. The association will charter a steamer for the week-end of June 12-15.

The coal division of the association will hold its eleventh annual outing at Baur's Beach, Bay Ridge, June 27. At their last meeting the division decided to close its yards on all Saturdays during June, July and August.

The Washington Restaurant Association, which is also a division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, will hold its first summer outing at the farm of Evan Sholl in Maryland, July 27.

Col. J. C. Fegan, Marine Corps, Is Transferred

Will Go to Newport, R. I.; to Be Replaced by Col. de Carre.

Lieut. Col. Joseph C. Fegan, in charge of public relations for the Marine Corps headquarters in Washington, is to be promoted to the rank of colonel and transferred to the Naval War College at Newport, R. I., it was learned yesterday.

He will be replaced by Lieut. Col. Alphonse de Carre, son of Mrs. Rose de Carre, of 618 Nineteenth street northwest, and now executive officer of the Marine Barracks at Norfolk, Va. The shift is scheduled to take place Thursday.

Two other promotions effective the same date, it was learned, will be those of Lieut. Col. Thomas S. Clarke, commanding officer of the Washington Marine Barracks, and Lieut. Col. Alley D. Rorex, attached to Marine headquarters, both to be advanced to the rank of colonel. Clarke is to remain at his post here, while Rorex will be transferred to Portsmouth.

Section to Be Divided.

With Col. Fegan's transfer, the work of the public relations section of marine headquarters is to be broken up into two sections. Col. de Carre will handle public relations and the Marine Gazette, while Maj. John M. Arthur, of Marine headquarters, will handle the legislative work.

Well known in sport circles as a prize-fight and football enthusiast, Col. Fegan has had an active part in the expansion of Marine sports. While serving as head of the public relations section and recruiting officer in this city from 1924 to 1929, he originated the practice of traveling Marine football and baseball teams. The seaboard tours of these Marine teams and their games with many of the leading universities and colleges not only brought the Marine Corps publicity, but induced many college men who had played against the Marines to join the service.

A graduate of Cornell University, where he played football and rowed on the crew, Col. Fegan entered the Marine Corps in 1909. In succeeding years he saw service in Panama, Cuba and the Philippines, where he was stationed during the war. In 1929, when his tour of duty in this city ended, he went to Haiti and then to the Marine barracks at Quantico, Va. He returned to the office of public relations in 1933.

Native of Capital.

A native of Washington, Col. de Carre entered the Marine Corps in 1913. His first taste of action came in 1915 while stationed at Haiti when there was trouble with the natives. As a captain in the Fifth Regiment of the Marines in France, his World War record was one of the most brilliant in the Marine Corps. Several times he was cited for gallantry in action and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the Navy Cross, the French medal of the Legion of Honor, and the French Croix de Guerre three times.

The Distinguished Service Cross was given him for capturing two enemy machine guns single-handed. It was on June 11, 1918, in the Bois-de-Belleau. De Carre was commanding a detachment of about 60 men in the rear of the attacking battalion. When the advance battalion swerved to the right, he went on alone, about 150 yards, encountering deadly machine gun fire. He continued on, capturing the two guns and then, bringing up his detachment, captured the entire enemy machine gun company of three officers and 100 men.

Throng to View Middy Festival Opening Today

Water Carnival to Depict Burning of Frigate and Neptune's Arrival.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 29.—With preparations completed to handle a crowd of from 10,000 to 15,000 spectators, the Naval Academy authorities tonight were ready for the opening of June Week tomorrow and the water carnival that will climax the program.

The carnival, beginning at 7:30 p. m., will center around the re-enactment of the burning of the frigate Philadelphia by Stephen Decatur during the war with the Barbary corsairs in 1804. The water front at the academy has been converted into a miniature Tripoli.

Two forts guard the entrance to Dewey Basin, in which is anchored a replica of the Philadelphia. Lateen sails, to give the proper setting, have been rigged on all boats in the basin. The tennis courts form the city and streets of Tripoli.

A narrator will give the historical background of the wreck of the Philadelphia and its capture by the corsairs, together with the determination of the Americans to destroy it to prevent the vessel being used against them.

The general public will be admitted to the Academy for the carnival without tickets. It will begin with about 1,500 midshipmen and guests at supper in the streets of "Tripoli."

As the supper concludes the lights will be extinguished and Decatur and his crew will enter the "harbor" disguised as Maltese fishermen. They will parley with the corsairs on the Philadelphia and receive permission to tie up to her mooring chain. The attack, burning and sinking of the frigate will follow.

Decatur and his crew will start out of the "harbor," with the "forts" opening fire and Tripolitan gunboats in pursuit. The roar of cannon will be mingled with the red, green and white flares sent up as the daring American party escapes to the open sea.

Fourteen motor launches will take the members of the graduating class and their escorts out on the Severn River near the destroyer Babbitt for the next episode—the arrival of King Neptune.

The ocean king, impersonated by a midshipman, will be accompanied by three mermaids, all midshipmen. He will board the Babbitt and greet Rear Admiral David Foot Sellers, superintendent of the Academy.

Brilliantly illuminated subchasers, patrol boats and ketches will parade around the Babbitt during the ceremony, passing in review before Neptune.

A fireworks display will be set off from the Severn shore. At its conclusion the 14 motor launches will take the graduating class and their guests 7 miles out to Annapolis Roads, where they will dance on the deck of the battleship Wyoming.

Debutante Married

Underwood & Underwood.

THE FORMER MISS VIRGINIA RODGERS.

Miss Rodgers, Warrenton Man Wed in Surprise

Local Horsewoman, 1935 Debutante, Is Bride of J. Edward Barker.

Washington society has another surprise marriage to talk about today—that of Virginia Rodgers, debutante of last season, and J. Edward Barker, of Warrenton, Va.

They were married Thursday in Richmond, Va., according to a brief announcement last night by Capt. C. R. P. Rodgers, the bride's father.

At the Barker home in Warrenton last night, a member of his family said that the marriage was a "surprise" and that no details were known.

The bride, one of the city's best-known horsewomen, was introduced to Washington society last November by her mother, Mrs. Philip O. Coffin, at her home, 2110 S street northwest.

This coming-out party followed by a few days the marriage of Mrs. Coffin's other daughter, Alicia Rodgers, to John F. Sweeney.

The new Mrs. Barker has been a popular member of Washington's younger set. She is a graduate of the Ethel Walker School and attended the Holton Arms School.

Army Tests in August.

Rural Women Expect 6,500 At Local Rally

Triennial Convention to Hear Foreign Delegates Monday.

Greetings in a half-dozen languages will open the largest convention of women ever to be held in Washington, the third triennial meeting of the Associated Country Women of the World, which begins Monday noon at Constitution Hall.

Among the 6,500 housewives expected to attend are 150 delegates from 22 foreign countries. A representative of each country will greet the vast throng at the opening session, each speech being limited to one sentence.

Many of the foreign delegates will speak in English. Among those who will talk in their native tongues are Miss Helen Hunt from Burma, Mme. von Numers from Finland, Mme. Olga Kulitan from Latvia, Mrs. Eva van der Vies from the Netherlands, Frau Kuessner-Gerhard from Germany, Frau Marie Michelet from Norway, Mrs. Bernard Alexander from Palestine, Frau Marta Silfverhjelm from Sweden and Frau Frederic Rohner from Switzerland.

Foreign delegates who will deliver their greetings in English include Miss Lucy Franks from Ireland, Lady Kenya Cole from Kenya Colony in East Africa, Mrs. Hugh Patterson from New Zealand, Miss Winifred Howard from Scotland, Mrs. E. E. Dent from South Africa, Miss Joyce Rudd from Southern Rhodesia, Mrs. Kamala Mukerji from India and Mrs. K. Vaithianathan from Ceylon.

Fraternal delegates who will greet the conference are Miss Winifred Kydd of the International Council of Women, Miss Lena Madesin Phillips of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and Miss Elizabeth Eastman of the International Y. W. C. A.

The Associated Country Women of the World, consisting of 75 rural women's organizations, is meeting for the first time on American soil this year. Only a few American women attended the two previous triennial gatherings, held in Vienna and Stockholm. This year the bulk of the attendance will be made up of farm women from the United States.

Fourteen organizations within this country are sending official delegates who will take part in the group discussions scheduled to last through Friday. They will also answer questions regarding the work of their own groups.

The United States organizations and their official delegates are:

Women's National Farm and Garden Association: Mrs. Howard W. Lewis, of Philadelphia; Mrs. J. Bartlett Johnston, of Eccleston, Md.; Mrs. John W. Hutchison, of Saginaw, Mich.; Mrs. Charlotte Barrell Ware, of Boston, and Mrs. Alexander J. Barron, of Sewickley, Pa.

Associated Women of the American Farm Bureau Federation: Mrs. W. O. Redford, of Warrensburg, Mo.; Mrs. J. D. Giles, of Selma, Ala.; Mrs. George Tyler, of North Bloomfield, N. Y.; Mrs. Ellsworth Richardson, of Eddyville, Iowa, and Mrs. Mabel D. Ahart, of Lincoln, Calif.

National Guild of Master Farm Homemakers—Mrs. Raymond Sayre, of Ackworth, Iowa; Mrs. Fenton Gall, of Martinsburg, W. Va.; Mrs. Ray Johnson, of Cassleton, N. Dak.; Mrs. Elmer R. Waters, of Lafayette, Ind., and Mrs. Lyda Lynch, of Lexington, Ky.

New York State Federation of Home Bureaus—Mrs. Evelyn B. Gatchell, of North Rose; Mrs. Henry F. Burden, of Casenovia; Mrs. H. M. Wagenblass, of Warsaw; Miss Elizabeth MacDonald, of Delhi, and Mrs. A. E. Brigden, of Marathon.

North Carolina Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs—Mrs. J. Brooks Tucker, of Grimesland; Mrs. T. M. Woodburn, of Parmele; Mrs. Annie Godwin, of Godwin; Mrs. T. W. Lloyd, of Durham, and Mrs. Hubert Boney, of Teacheye.

Virginia Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs—Mrs. Guy Roop, of Snowville; Mrs. Nelson Beck, of Charlottesville; Mrs. George Winn, of Axton; Mrs. E. J. Curran, jr., of Meredithville, and Mrs. W. Thompson, of Woodbridge.

West Virginia Federation of Home Bureaus—Mrs. E. F. Bratton, of Princeton; Mrs. Vesta Green, of Abbott; Mrs. J. B. Porter, of New Cumberland, and Mrs. O. W. Barnette, of Mineral Wells.

Kentucky Federation of Homemakers—Mrs. T. M. Johnson, of Brookfield; Mrs. W. F. Oliver, of Paducah; Mrs. F. O. Moore, of Pineville; Mrs. J. H. Lawrence, of Clinton, and Mrs. John Land, of Lancaster.

Most of the women from the United States organizations will reach Washington on Monday. Foreign groups will arrive today and tomorrow.

Officers and members of the executive committee who have already come to the Capital include the president, Mrs. Alfred Watt, of Vancouver Island, Canada; two vice presidents, Mrs. Godfrey Drage, of Carnarvonshire, Wales, and Fru Marie Michelet, of Oslo, Norway; the secreatry, Miss Elsie M. Zimmern, of London; the assistant secretary, Mrs. Charles Russell, of London, and Miss Lillie Large, of Napier, New Zealand, a member of the executive committee.

Who do you think stands the best chance against Roosevelt today?
You've got me, pal! Wait till I see who the voters like—in AMERICA SPEAKS.

This Sunday, The Washington Post and more than 70 other leading American newspapers will present in AMERICA SPEAKS the most ambitious pre-convention analysis of candidates, parties and platforms ever attempted in the history of journalism.

The information, based on returns from the latest impartial nation-wide poll conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, will make known these significant facts just nine days before the opening of the Republican national convention:

1. The final popular vote among Republicans on the six men mentioned most frequently for the nomination.
2. An analysis of how the country feels about leading issues that may be discussed by Democratic and Republican platform makers.

This preview of the 1936 presidential campaign marks the first attempt ever made to obtain an impartial and scientifically accurate pre-convention picture of nation-wide public opinion toward campaign personalities and issues.

The American voter holds the fate of politicians and parties in the palm of his hand. That's why you'll want to know at all times exactly how he feels about political matters and national affairs that most concern him. Watch for his views each Sunday in AMERICA SPEAKS in The Washington Post.

State Milk Rates For Alexandria Market Upheld

Highland Farms, L. W. High Denied Injunction to Restrain Board.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 29.—Federal District Judge Robert N. Pollard today denied the petition of the Highland Farms Dairy, Inc., and Luther W. High, of Washington, for a temporary injunction to restrain the Virginia Milk Commission from applying its regulations in the Arlington-Alexandria market.

The regulations for that market are scheduled to go into effect Monday.

Judge Pollard said he would not issue an injunction against the commission if its regulations affected only intrastate commerce. Assistant Attorney General Edwin H. Gibson assured the court in his argument that the regulations would not affect interstate commerce.

The bill of complaint alleged that High purchases the output of the Highland Farms Dairy in Washington but is prohibited from selling milk on the Virginia market below the minimum price set by the State commission, and that a hearing by the agency was "insufficiently and arbitrarily conducted."

The petition attacked the constitutionality of the Virginia milk law on nine points, and asked it be declared invalid under article 1, section 8, of the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution.

The State commission recently won a case in Fairfax Circuit Court when other dairymen asked the State court to block application of regulations in northern Virginia.

Necromancy Topic Of Christ Scientists

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Jonah 2:8: "They that observe lying vanities forsake their own mercy."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick." (Matthew 8:16.)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus cast out evil and healed the sick, not only without drugs, but without hypnotism, which is the reverse of ethical and pathological Truth-power."

Freeman to Ordain Clarence A. Cole

Clarence Alfred Cole, student of theology, who is a member of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, will be ordained a deacon of the Protestant Episcopal Church by the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman at 11 a. m. services in Washington Cathedral, June 7.

Cole, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Cole, 621 A street southeast, was recently appointed assistant rector of Grace Church at Charleston, S. C., and will begin his duties there July 1.

After obtaining a bachelor of science degree at Benjamin Franklin University in Washington, Cole went to Duke University at Durham, N. C., and received from there a bachelor of arts degree. While at Duke he was lay leader at St. Philip's Episcopal parish in Durham. He will receive a bachelor of divinity degree from the Theological Seminary at Sewanee, Tenn., June 9.

Impressive But Incomplete.

In man's first attempt to transport himself across the water he merely clung to a log, brute-like. Then came the thought of hollowing out his craft, either by flint ax or fire, from which it was an easy step to a coracle—bark or skin stretched over a framework. Here was the first concept of ribs and cross-pieces. His next advance was to build a boat of wood, stitched together with fibers or thongs. By enlarging on this design he slowly achieved a ship, probably in Egypt some 2,000 years B. C.

Meantime, he had learned to step a mast and rig sails on it, though never abandoning his earliest poles, the tips of which had been flattened into blades. And, in Phoenicia, he had learned to steer by the stars. With benches of a hundred or more slaves in tiers to pull the long sweeps, he cruised at will throughout the Inland Sea mainly to fight, but gradually, as peace descended on the world, to transport food and riches. The invention of gunpowder demanded abrupt changes in naval designs. Strength, rather than speed, became his chief aim. It was the day of the square-rigged carrack and caravel, such as the Santa Maria. Trade routes to the East were opened and speed once again was at a premium. So he designed the French lugger, the Blackwall frigate and, ultimately, the Baltimore clipper.

Then came steam, and with it the suggestion of making iron float. In 1818 he attached paddle wheels to the Savannah and, though they ran for only 80 hours during the trip, this was the first steamship to cross the Atlantic. He learned to use fresh water instead of salt in his boilers, he convinced himself of the superiority of the screw propeller, he developed the expansion engine and next the steam turbine. Today, so complete are his leviathans, that passengers may swim or dance or talk to any shore while a thousand miles at sea. His latest, Queen Mary by name, is even now testing her speed with the hope of bringing the Isle of Wight within four days of Sandy Hook. The world thrills to the genius which has produced such luxury afloat.

Notwithstanding all, however, man has yet to learn to prevent war between his ships. Assuredly, the Queen Mary carries no guns, but the Queen Mary is an altogether secondary consideration in his concern for the sea today. Every navy grows apace. Until man scuttles his last dreadnaught and torpedo boat, his victory over the sea will remain tragically incomplete.

Contempt All Around.

Dr. Townsend virtually "dared" the House to cite him for contempt when he walked out of a committee room saying that he would not testify again unless brought back under arrest. Such a deliberate challenge to its authority, as well as the refusal of two Townsend aids to respond to committee subpenas, could not be ignored by a legislative body having any regard for its own prestige.

In turning to the District Supreme Court for redress, instead of trying this case before its own membership, the House may have been influenced by considerations of political expediency. But, motives apart, there are excellent reasons why a decision should be left to the court. It can much more judiciously pass upon the only question at issue: namely, whether Dr. Townsend and his aids are guilty of contempt.

A House trial would not only have delayed adjournment, but it also would have given the Townsend leaders an incomparable opportunity to revive a rapidly waning popular interest in a discredited movement. Dr. Townsend's assertion that the House is afraid to summon him and discuss his plan on its merits strongly suggests disappointment at the outcome of his revolt. At the same time some justification for charges of cowardice can be found in the refusal of House members to have their votes on the contempt resolution recorded.

The unreasonable tactics pursued in examining Dr. Townsend are chiefly to blame for the series of clashes that ended in his defiant declaration and dramatic exit from the House committee room. The habit of examining witnesses before Congressional committees with Fascist technique has in this case played directly into the hands of Dr. Townsend. It has enabled him to halt an investigation that has ruthlessly exposed his ignorance of the plan bearing his name and revealed the sordid motives of its promoters.

If the committee had devoted itself to a dispassionate investigation of the Townsend movement and had been content to acquire the simple facts about the financial operations of the OARP, the racket would have been effectively exposed for what it really is. Unfortunately, the committee has provided its sponsor with a most convenient excuse for refusing to testify and has enabled him to dramatize his gesture of defiance in a most effective manner.

Germany's Economic Crisis.

The German foreign trade figures for April throw an indirect but none the less revealing light on what has come to be called the "Schacht crisis."

Despite the efforts sponsored by Dr. Schacht to force an expansion of exports through a system of subsidies, while at the same time keeping imports down to the barest minimum, the tendency during recent months has been in the direction of declining exports without a commensurate reduction in imports. Thus during April, when the export total was 12.2 per cent less than for December, 1935, Germany's favorable balance of trade amounted only to 5,000,000 marks. A continuation of this trend would mean the collapse of the Schacht program, which has encountered increasing opposition because of the heavy burdens it imposes on German industry and labor.

One interpretation of the decline in Germany's foreign sales between December and April is that the 1,000,000,000-mark levy imposed on German industry last year to subsidize exports was exhausted prematurely. Since then a new and larger export subsidy fund has been decreed. But it is questionable whether this system of robbing Peter to pay Paul can go on much longer. That Dr. Schacht himself is dubious of the outcome unless there is also resort to large-scale deflation of governmental costs is no secret. But the pressure from the Nazi radicals has thus far prevented the carrying out of any important economy measures. As a result the situation rapidly approaches a crisis.

During the past three years the budget has been kept a state secret. But it is no secret that during that time the government has been forced to finance re-armament and an elaborate labor-creation program very largely out of borrowing. Today, according to competent authorities, the national debt is probably in excess of 40,000,000,000 marks. Many believe, therefore, that the time is fast approaching when it will be impossible further to postpone a choice between deflation and devaluation.

The large sums pumped into German industry by the government, which has been during recent years practically the only source of new capital and the principal customer for a great variety of goods, has been responsible for the industrial boom which has given Germany a surface measure of prosperity.

The Nazis point proudly to the fact that since the Hitler government came into being unemployment has been reduced from around 6,500,000 to 1,763,000. This has been made possible, in large part, by expanding production. But it is significant that while the rate of increase in the output of production goods was, according to estimates made by the Frankfurter Zeitung, around 113 per cent, the manufacture of consumers goods increased, during the same period, by only 14 per cent.

During that time, the same source reveals, the average hourly wage for men, despite a sharp rise in the cost of living, actually declined by 5 per cent. Obviously the German people are being forced to accept a lowered standard of living to enable the government to increase national armaments.

It is not surprising, under the circumstances, that the Nazi radicals are now clamoring for a larger measure of socialization while even the more conservative elements in the party have come around to the viewpoint that devaluation of the mark which, it is believed, would give a fillip to export industries, is the best way out for the Reich. But in view of the fact that the mark has a gold parity only within Germany itself, where the price level has already been rising, it is difficult to see what particular good devaluation could accomplish.

In the face of these internal stresses and strains on the German economic and financial situation it should occasion no surprise if, in the near future, the regime should again seek to divert the attention of the people by a new foreign adventure. From a number of viewpoints the general international situation seems to be favorable to such a move. The outside world, therefore, can view the struggle of the contending elements in the Third Reich with neither detachment nor equanimity.

The Red Rider Battle.

Where the House has hedged and procrastinated on the "red rider" issue, the Senate seems to be in a fair way of doing something positive about it. The upper chamber's committee on education has just filed a report recommending its repeal. So clear is the reasoning that extended debate on the motion would seem pointless.

The committee finds six principal reasons for striking from the books the statute which forbids District school teachers to mention Russia. The fact that each point has been argued before merely emphasizes the mountain of evidence confirming the committee's judgment. The Senators found that the rider on the 1936 appropriations act only stirs up pupils' interest in communism and drives them to untrustworthy sources for information about it; that it is an insult to the integrity of teachers; that it impugns the ability of the Board of Education to meet its responsibilities; that it flies in the face of the American principles of freedom of speech and education; that it would not prevent the spread of communism even if our schools were in danger of being perverted by Soviet propaganda, and that it constitutes a bad example for State legislatures throughout the country.

Those many Washingtonians who are seeking a speedy repeal of the obnoxious amendment are now in a much stronger position to demand action in both houses before adjournment. For no group of legislators, however vociferous, will be able to refute the compelling logic of the Senate committee's report.

Pointing The Way Out.

Senator Thomas has opened the way to an ideal solution of the controversy over the District appropriations bill. Apparently the two houses are hopelessly deadlocked on the question of how much the Government should contribute to the revenue of the Capital City. In these circumstances recourse to fact-finding and unbiased judgment is the only rational compromise.

Every member of Congress should welcome the plan of having an expert and impartial commission work out a formula to govern the fiscal relations between the District and Federal governments. The present haphazard arrangement leads to a squabble every year. Neither house is satisfied by the outcome, and the District is placed under a severe handicap. Only those politicians who believe that baiting the District raises them in the esteem of their own constituents can be expected to oppose solution of the problem on a factual basis.

Senator Thomas is especially to be congratulated on the astute manner in which he has dislodged Representative Blanton from the inside track of this controversy. By asking the House to support his arbitrary stand, Mr. Blanton hoped to force a surrender on the part of the Senate conferees. But they have not only refused to yield; they have also put Mr. Blanton and his supporters on the spot. It will be impossible for any Congressman to fight the Senator's eminently fair proposal without revealing indefensible bias and ill-will against the District.

If the size of the Federal contribution to the District budget is to be adjusted by a scientific formula, moreover, there should be no need for resort to a continuing resolution. Such a resolution would allow the District precisely the same amount as is provided in the appropriation bill approved by the Senate. It could not, therefore, be construed as a victory for the Blanton faction. But it would reduce District institutions to a subsistence basis, with no allowance whatever for capital improvements, extension of the public health service, etc. It is impossible to see how the House could gain any satisfaction from such an outcome.

President Roosevelt is said to be lukewarm to the proposed fiscal relations study because similar efforts in the past have come to naught. From that line of reasoning a large part of his recovery program may be viewed with skepticism. Since Congress adopted the "lump sum" policy there has never been an adequate study of the resulting fiscal problem. Such limited investigations as have been made have led to no positive recommendations that could be readily adopted. What is now needed is a survey that will lead to a definite formula for measurement of the Government's obligations to the Capital City. Only through such an inquiry, it appears, can District affairs be lifted out of the political muddle in which they are now immersed.

No Amateurs Wanted.

Aside from their frequent miscarriage of justice, the hopeless inefficiency of untrained men who band together to supplement the law's efforts is well demonstrated in the news from Louisiana. Possemen, in beating through the wilderness to find an escaped convict, have shot three of their own number. Two of the searchers fired blindly at vague movements in the brush in accordance with their orders to "shoot to kill."

The order, in the first place, was rashly given. Not even police officers trailing the most dangerous maniac receive such unqualified instructions. Plainly, hysteria was ruling the sheriffs who organized the posse. Add to this the nervousness of volunteers unaccustomed to the business of man-hunting and the mistaken shots are quite understandable. But they may not be so simply excused—in fact, they never can be condoned.

Particularly in this country, where the vigilante tradition of frontier days still lingers, impulsive cries for revenge must be continually guarded against. At best, they open the way for such blunders as Louisiana reports; at worst, they result in "Black Legions" of the sort Michigan is now belatedly scotching.

Hopes For Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Dr. William Sheafe Chase printed in The Post of May 22 is an interesting exposition of the way in which world peace might be achieved, but his strictures against Mussolini would be more convincing if he had given his readers more factual data. He may or may not know about the long list of grievances which Italy nourished against Ethiopia and which were duly presented to the League of Nations. Failing to obtain redress, Mussolini had no other alternative than to adopt measures leading to a solution satisfactory to the aggrieved nation.

With all due respect to Dr. Chase's fears that the coming of world peace has been postponed for another millennium, it cannot be conceded that Mussolini is the only statesman at whom such an accusation might be levelled. Offhand I should say that almost every great power is now increasing its military appropriations, and it is entirely illusory to couple this policy with any scheme to bring about enduring peace.

Your correspondent thinks the United States, by uniting with Great Britain, could bring Italy to terms through the use of military force. It is to be strongly doubted whether we are so devoid of national sanity that we would now or in the future form an alliance with any foreign power in order to help that power conquer a potential or actual enemy. This is indeed a strange suggestion from one advocating that only peaceable methods must prevail in the settlement of international conflicts. GUY d'AULBY.

Safeguards Of The People.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The impressive scene of the massing of the colors on Sunday afternoon on Mount St. Albans should be of more than passing interest and influence. The sight of that army of banners thrilled that great crowd of 5,000 people.

But of more importance than the passing pageant were the earnest words of Rear Admiral Harry Hamlet and the eloquence and appealing sermon of Bishop Freeman. Bishop Freeman combines in a remarkable degree the spirit and fire of certain of the Old Testament prophets in his denunciation of the sins and evils of the times with the gentleness of the Good Shepherd in his desire to save the people in these times of great danger.

The occasion was one to awaken not only a spirit of patriotism but of zeal and devotion to moral and spiritual interests which are the safeguard and salvation of any people. J. BACKUS.

The Monastery Attack.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So opportune and so forcible is the editorial, "Running True to Form," in The Post, that I cannot curb the wish to thank you.

Appearing as it does in a leading daily, the article may tend to enlighten ignorant bigots and frustrate the aims of those who hunger for schemes by which to persecute religious orders.

Every Catholic feels this latest charge of Hitler's can only be false, and I, as a Catholic, thank you for denouncing the venomous attack. INNO McGILL.

Prince Georges Invitation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you permit another lady and home-owner for over 35 years in Prince Georges County to agree with the recent letter written by a Berwin lady, wherein she claimed the commissioners of said county appeared disturbed by outsiders not buying here?

Should any one or two of the above-mentioned gentlemen be sufficiently interested, the writer would like to invite them as an overnight guest to her home any night that the atmosphere is a bit heavy (which it always is after midnight), and especially when the wind is from the south. They will quickly learn why people could not possibly settle within smelling distance of a certain (now supposed to be legalized) nuisance.

Reply To A 'War Debt' Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Most intelligent people realize that international obligations relating to so-called "war debts" are intricate problems difficult for even disinterested economic experts.

However, your correspondent from the ancient Rome of Georgia in a letter published on May 25, dashing valiantly in where angels fear to tread, presents to us together with his extraordinarily inacurate ideas on European and British war debts the slogan—"Cede Us Canada."

It may save further thought and effort on his part to be assured that Canada has neither the desire nor the intention of being "ceded." She only has to observe the prostitution of politics; of municipal government; the unbalanced ideas of what constitutes reputation and society; the growing menace of a mongrel citizenship, jealous and destructive of everything above and beyond its ken, to understand full well that she is very healthy and happy with mother.

As to your correspondent's naive remarks regarding international obligations, there are three salient points to consider:

Secondly, the loans protected and enriched the United States.

Thirdly, it has been generally conceded that so-call war debts have been a bar to world recovery.

During the years before we entered the war, the British navy had protected our sea-borne commerce and the lives of our nationals at an enormous cost—in spite of the fact that we, with pleasant impartiality, were delivering contraband to the enemy nations to the detriment of the Allies, and thus aiding in prolonging the war.

As Woodrow Wilson said at the time of our entry, the "Liberty Loan" was raised for the express purpose of being America's contribution until such time as her own men could take their place in the fighting line. The same statement was repeatedly made in the United States' Senate. The loan, it was said, was raised in the spirit of "contribution" as a simple duty to the Allies.

So far as Great Britain and Europe are concerned the post-war antics of American finance lessened their ability to pay in goods or funds. Tariffs were raised against products, and the farcial and unbelievedly corrupt and costly introduction of "prohibition" helped to maim the wine industries of France and western Europe.

Add to this the universal difference in ability to pay; the repudiation of Russia of the enormous obligations due to England and France; the lack of the middle-European powers to meet reparations for inexpressible damage; the loss of the flower of manpower by the Allies—a huge casualty total of 21,266,000, and what does the "loss" incurred by the United States amount to? The entire casualties suffered by the United States amounted to 317,386. Compare these figures with those of Great Britain and her colonies—3,200,110.

It has been said that the American will die for his country but won't be taxed for it. The unfortunate Englishman has had to do both.

Mr. Filene's Record.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial appearing in your issue of May 26 entitled "Mr. Filene's Charges" is hardly up to the standard of discrimination, restraint and fairness usually attained by your paper.

A careful examination of the life of Mr. Filene and his contributions to the welfare of mankind would seem to eliminate Mr. Filene from those who do things "obviously intended for political effect." His foresight in being one of the cofounders and organizers of the United States Chamber of Commerce, his unselfish labors in the field of industrial democratization, his splendid founding of the Twentieth Century Fund which has done an excellent job of social and political research, and his origination of and contributions to the great Credit Union movement, should all acquit him of the baser motive which your editorial suggests.

Is it not true to say that Mr. Filene has consistently supported all that is best of the Administration's far reaching social policies and is not his withdrawal from the United States Chamber of Commerce properly due to a fair evaluation of that organization's failure to do effective work? As far as I know, Mr. Filene has never remarked on the methods of the Administration, either for or against. But he has definitely come forward in support of the humanitarian ends in view with which, it is suggested, that no right thinking man can quarrel.

Mr. Filene has been a consistent liberal however, one may interpret that word, in his entire business and social career. He has blazed many a trial beset by reactionary obstruction and has been a staunch minority for the right in the face of sturdy opposition. Yet he has lived to see his ideas prevail, has seen them accepted and flourish and will likely look back on many accomplished facts which Mr. Sibley now appears to deride as "one of his little stunts."

Furthermore, is it not somewhat ridiculous to emphasize the fact that the conditions, which Mr. Filene describes, existed at the time he was more active in the United States Chamber of Commerce. On the contrary, it appears that he has often, in the past, as stated in his open letter, made the same criticisms! Mr. Filene has long pushed against the inactivity of the chamber, and now you blame him and his motives for expressing the view that he feels he can no longer serve effectively in the movement which he helped to found, namely, a central organization of commerce and industry. Alexandria's Council.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the people of Alexandria were one-half as interested in what is going on as The Post, you would have to print an extra edition to care for your circulation. Our present "borrow and spend" council is still on the job, and these "second the motion" members always wake up in time to sneeze after their leader has taken snuff.

We are so far in debt on these alphabetical projects that we fear there will be a hangover on the shoulders of posterity when Gabriel blows his horn, which, perhaps, will be the only thing possible to wake up over 3,000 qualified voters to a sense of their responsbility; citizens who know their duty but fail to do it, satisfying themselves at home and on street corners damning the powers that be when it is in their power to put a stop to the increasing waste.

At the last meeting of the wise city fathers they placed another $50,000 on the cuff, expecting to get it when the taxes are collected. In other words, "on prospects." On June 9, the voters will have a chance to remedy these conditions by the election of three men who are diametrically opposed to the present method of administering the city's affairs.

It is civic negligence to refuse to vote and allow grave issues to be decided by a small minority.

The Post Impressionist

"This Here Freedom."

Post Office, Saturday.

IT is well to know all sorts of people. The differences among them help to keep your mind open.

There, for instance, was the late M. Carey Thomas, of Baltimore and Bryn Mawr. And here is the Major.

* * *

When Mr. Hutchinson—that Mr. Hutchinson who has so many initials—wrote his book about Mark Sabre, who fought, by non-resistence, for pacifism, Miss Thomas rather approved the story. But she didn't at all approve Mr. H's later story, "This Freedom," which was nothing more or less than an overt attack upon all forms—except the more ancient—of Feminism.

At the time of its appearance, the former head of Bryn Mawr College was sojourning in Constantinople. The book was brought her with other mail, while she breakfasted. She turned a few pages, then called the waiter.

* * *

"Waiter," said she, holding the novel forth by a disgusted thumb and even more disgusted forefinger, "take this—this thing out, and drop it in the Bosphorus."

* * *

Yet the Major—who, if neither president nor dean of Bryn Mawr, is chairman of the school board in a borough of over 12,000 population—takes, as you may remember, quite another point of view. He probably has his copy of "This Here Freedom," as it used to be irreverently called, on that shelf of books which he keeps by his chaste bedside.

* * *

* * *

"I've just read in a newspaper," he writes us, "that there were twice as many women who got jobs in New York last year as there were the year before. And," he adds, "the increase of the female birthrate over the male birthrate was less than 3 per cent.

"Those jobs," he continues, "were of all kinds, but the big majority of them were the kind of jobs that are naturally men's jobs. Hardly any of them are cooking jobs, or housework, or dressmaking and millinery jobs. There are even fewer store clerking and stenographic jobs among them than you'd think there'd be.

* * *

"It all goes to support what I've been arguing for so long: I mean, the way women are steadily filling the entire labor field. It won't be long now until there isn't any place left for a mere man—especially since pianos are going out of fashion and there's hardly any need of piano movers. It won't be long, that is, unless we men do something about it.

"There's no use pleading with women on the grounds of the greatest good to the greatest number," says the Major: "Women haven't social sense. So there's no use arguing with them that a woman, who becomes a wireless operator or a puddler, is keeping some man out of work—and most likely a man who has a lot of women folk dependent on him.

* * *

"The only way you can get any results is to make them see that the natural man-job is bad for their beauty, and that the natural woman-job is good for it.

"And the funny thing is that this is true, and that there's one woman who says so, and that she's the kind of woman they'll most likely listen to. She's Miss Dorothy H. Bateman, the physical instructor for the women's department of Cornell University.

* * *

"Your own paper had a piece in it about her just the other day.

* * *

"She said bending over—like bending over a wash tub—and lifting things—like sacks of flour—was the best way to 'keep strong and slender hips' and 'prevent the middle-age spread.' She said all a woman had to do was to remember, when she stooped, to keep one foot in front of the other—and, when she raised up, to 'keep the back straight and use the thigh and hip muscles'—and not to 'collapse at the waistline and make the back muscles do all the work.'

* * *

"It was in an Associated Press dispatch, so it must have been true.

* * *

"This Miss Bateman said sweeping was grand. She said: 'Tasks which require overhead reaching, like dusting and hanging curtains, are fine stretching exercises'—if you don't 'do them too suddenly.'

"She said: 'If she works properly, the housewife is ahead of the office-worker any time, in keeping fit.' She put it to 'em flat that doing housework is the best way for a woman to keep her figure.

* * *

"What I want," the Major concludes, "is that Miss Bateman's system should be introduced in the public schools and then brought to the attention of the Secretary of Labor. Then, prehaps, it won't be necessary in a year or two for the War Department to advertise it in order to save some places in the American Army for American men."

* * *

But the Post-Impressionist is sure that Miss Thomas would not have agreed with the Major any more than we do.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

G-Man Possibilities.

The Michigan delegation in Congress now want a law to permit the G-men of the Department of Justice to investigate the Black Legion, and this may be a reasonable desire, considering that the first American Nazi organization has crossed the State lines. But the request indicates a growing tendency of the cities and States to run crying to the Government every time some fiend in human form robs a hen roost or picks a fight with a bartender. And that is not so good for several reasons.

For one thing the cities and States, and the counties as well, are carrying a heavy pay roll for police protection of various kinds and aren't getting their money's worth. For another, if the locals develop the habit of passing the buck to Washington in jobs calling for nothing more than ordinary intelligence and reasonably hard work, the Department of Justice will need a force the size of an army and laws permitting the G-men to make arrests for disorderly conduct. And, furthermore, it would be just too bad if someone on the order of Harry Dougherty, who was Harding's Attorney General, should get hold of the department, fire all the good G-men, load up with political heels and turn them loose to do the best they could for themselves.

• • • •

You can judge how bad that would be by observing the quality of the police work in many cities where the chief of police is a political appointee whose first job is to take care of friends of the local administration. For that matter, it is a good thing Homer Cummings has kept Jim Farley's hands off the bureau, because a job is a job to Mr. Farley, and there are 6,000 operatives' jobs alone, to say nothing of 1,000 other jobs in the finger-print plant, the clerical department and so forth.

Observing the quality of the talent that Mr. Farley selected for other jobs in other branches of the Government, you can easily imagine what a ruin he would make of the Bureau of Investigation if he had a crack at those 1,600 jobs under his rules of fitness.

The local forces scattered around the country have just about worn out the alibi that rapid transportation and limited jurisdiction prevent them from doing good work. This explanation has obscured the known fact that thousands of police jobs, especially in the smaller cities and towns, are soft spots for big, ignorant lumps, who have neither special training nor natural aptitude for police work, but like to carry guns and ride around in department flivvers listening to the baseball scores on the radio. The sheriff's staffs are the worst of all, because most sheriffs are strictly politicians after the legal graft which goes with the office under the fee system, who name as their deputies men who helped them get out the vote on election day. It is no wonder that the Federal men distrust local police when they go out to pick up criminals. They have learned that some cops blab information, ball up evidence, don't know anything about the laws under which they are supposed to operate and just generally clutter up any job calling for discretion.

It isn't necessarily that the locals are crooked, although too many of them are petty grafters. The worst trouble is that a large proportion are not policemen at all, but got their jobs merely because they were good athletes in high school, didn't like monotonous toil and were able to pass an examination in simple arithmetic and spelling.

Considering the carelessness of the citizens toward their police departments, it should never be a surprise to discover situations like that in Tampa, where members of the Police Department assisted in the kidnaping and flogging of a man merely because they thought he was a Socialist or Communist. There are not many who would know the difference between a Socialist and a Communist, in the first place, and there are too many who think that to be either is a capital offense. During the Ku Klux days many of the policemen in Southern communities joined up, believing, such was their intelligence, that this was the patriotic thing to do, and that is the grade of intelligence which is assigned the responsibility for catching swindlers, kidnapers and hundreds of other varieties of crooks.

But all the while, the local communities, counties and States go along paying tremendous sums of money for police protection and accepting crime as one of the forces of nature. The people see slot machines in action and know where they can go to play roulette—both sure signs that corruption is rife in town. They know their local racketeers by sight, and still they are inclined to believe that such things have to be because they always have been.

The Bureau of Investigation is largely showmanship, but a first-class detective force, nevertheless, as the record shows. But it will be well to keep an eye on it because the chief of the G-men, like any chief of police, may be replaced with a political appointee, whenever the Attorney General wants to make the change. In other words, some future Attorney General may fire Edgar Hoover and put in someone like Gaston B. Means—and good-by G-men.

German Steamer Saves 5 Survivors of Disaster

Haugesund, Norway, May 29 (AP).—The German steamer Helene radioed tonight it had picked up one of the lifeboats belonging to the Norwegian steamer Hogstad which sank yesterday in the North Sea.

Six men were in the boat, one of them dead, it reported.

The master of the Dutch steamship, Westplein, yesterday reported by wireless it had rescued the captain of the Hogstad. He was drifting alone in a lifeboat.

China And Mongolia

Nanking Observer Predicts Chiang Kai-shek Will Never Join With Russia Now Backing Ulan Bator Soviet.

By James Shen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Nanking.

IN EARLY APRIL the Chinese government lodged its first protest with Moscow against her mutual aid pact with Outer Mongolia on the basis of the Peking Agreement of May 31, 1924. According to article five of this treaty, "The Government of the U. S. S. R. recognizes that Outer Mongolia is an integral part of the Republic of China and respects China's sovereignty therein."

Outer Mongolia being an integral part of China, no foreign state has the right to conclude with it any treaty or agreement. The action of Russia, therefore, in entering into a mutual assistance pact with the territory constitutes an infringement of China's sovereignty and a violation of Russia's pledges given in 1924.

Significantly enough, the Chinese protest was mildly worded. It merely asked for a satisfactory reply, without the seemingly necessary "threat" of resorting to legal or other effective measures to protect her rights in Outer Mongolia. For the truth of the matter is that China does not like to offend Russia at this particular moment when she is being beset with problems of a Japanese origin and of a more serious nature.

Tokyo thought that the Chinese note was much too weak. But in Moscow, it was immediately interpreted as the result of Japanese goading. This literally threw the higher-ups in China's Foreign Office into fits.

China's Protest Seen Properly Advanced.

LEGALLY speaking, China's protest rested on solid ground. All her talks about her sovereignty in Outer Mongolia were convincing. But they are only half of the truth, the other half being the fact that since the establishment of the Mongolian People's Republic in Outer Mongolia in 1924 under Russian direction, the Chinese Central Government, with its hands full of pressing matters in China proper, has lost all control in that northern territory.

Since 1924, Outer Mongolia has had her own Soviet form of government, her own army, her own currency system and a large corps of Russian advisers, both military and political. It has had nothing whatsoever to do with the Chinese Central Government. For guidance and help, it looks to Moscow. The only foreign representative in its capital, now known as Ulan Bator, is from the Russian government.

There had been in existence a "gentleman's agreement" between Soviet Russia and Outer Mongolia providing for mutual assistance in case of a military attack from a third party. The alarming tension on the Mongolian-Manchukuo borders during recent months apparently gave the two governments the impetus to write down this verbal agreement and publish it, possibly to warn Japan from any more encroachments upon Mongolian territory.

To put it in another way, Russia, by signing the treaty with Outer Mongolia, shows her determination to maintain the status quo in the latter territory, if necessary, by the force of the Red army, of which there are reportedly 200,000 men in Siberia with hundreds of airplanes, tanks and heavy field pieces. Stalin obviously meant business when he told Roy Howard of the United Press that Russia was determined to defend Outer Mongolia if the latter should be attacked by Japan.

Russian Note Reassured Fears Of Chinese.

ON APRIL 8, Russia replied to China's protest, denying that her pact with Outer Mongolia in any way constitutes a violation of China's sovereignty, as it does not admit of or contain any territorial claims whatsoever by the U. S. S. R. in regard to China or Outer Mongolia.

"The signing of the protocol does not introduce any changes in the relations, either judicial or factual, hitherto existing between the Union U. S. S. R. and China, and between the U. S. S. R. and Outer Mongolia," the Soviet reply pointed out, continuing that as far as the U. S. S. R. is concerned, the Chinese-Russian agreement signed in 1924 remains in force. In conclusion, the note declared that the U. S. S. R. "desires to express its deep conviction that the government of the Chinese Republic will be satisfied that the Soviet-Mongolian protocol corresponds to the interests of the Mongolian, as well as the Chinese people."

China was right in protesting against the protocol. Her rights under the agreement of 1924 are clear. But Russia is not wrong, either, insofar as practical politics and expediency are concerned. If Japan should invade Outer Mongolia, China would be absolutely helpless. Anyone who questions this can take a look at the Chinese map and find out for himself how impossible it is for China to re-exert her powers in Outer Mongolia, now that she has been entirely cut off from the vast northern territory by the presence of Japanese in such provinces as Hopei, Chahar and Suiyuan.

Russia's interests in Outer Mongolia are not territorial in character—for the time being at least. It is part of her Far Eastern policy to keep it as a buffer state, formerly between herself and the economic penetration of the Chinese, but since her defeat by Japan in 1904-05, between Siberia and Japan. The moment Japanese-Manchukuo troops step into Outer Mongolia, the "balance of power" in that section of Asia would be upset to the unspeakable disadvantage of Russia.

Thus, the defense of Outer Mongolia coincides with the defense of Siberia east of Lake Baikal. Since China as a factor in Outer Mongolia is now definitely out, Russia is the only power that can do anything to maintain the status quo, thereby protecting Siberia's flank in case of a second Russo-Japanese war. Besides, the 75,000 Mongolian army can be used effectively in threatening the rear of Japan's vanguard in the Mongolian desert. It is military strategy and practical politics which prompted Russia to announce to the world that she would defend Outer Mongolia if the latter were attacked by Japan.

China Well Pleased To See Mongolia Secured.

IT IS ALSO to the interest of the Chinese government to see the status quo in Outer Mongolia maintained intact. For the only alternative would be Japanese occupation. Russia, in her reply to the Chinese protest, assured China of Russia's determination to observe the Peking Agreement of 1924, wherein Russia recognizes Outer Mongolia as an integral part of China.

Of course, there is a legitimate fear that the Soviet-Mongolian pact might operate against China, too, if the latter should ever become strong enough to re-exert her power in Outer Mongolia. Moscow must have already assured Nanking that this fear is quite unnecessary. Naturally this is a question concerning the practical worth of a Russian assurance. At any rate, in Chinese eyes, it is preferrable to an outright occupation of Outer Mongolia by Japanese forces.

Russian aggression in Outer Mongolia and Japanese occupation of Manchuria may mean the same thing to many a Chinese, but others will sense this difference. Manchuria is a hundred times more valuable to China than Outer Mongolia. For China to push the case any harder than she did now would mean the loss of Russian sympathy when China needs it. It is simply inexpedient for China to take up the matter in any serious manner at the present moment.

It is an undeniable fact that the high advisers in China's foreign office are divided on the matter of policy. Should China be more friendly with Russia and, if possible secure an alliance with Moscow? Or should China stick to her present superficially pro-Japanese attitude? The latter group faces the disadvantage of having a poor record to show. Although they were not responsible for the loss of Manchuria, Jehol and, last year, the two northern provinces of Hopei and Chahar, in the public mind, these are inseparably associated with the so-called pro-Japanese policy.

On the other hand, the so-called pro-Russian elements find it embarrassing to reconcile their stand for a closer relationship, which means an alliance with Russia, with the chronic communistic uprisings in China. It certainly will not be conducive to happy friendship with Russia if China should sign an alliance with her on the one hand and on the other continue her present vigorous anti-Communist policy in China.

Communists In China Differ In Virulence.

UNLIKE the Communists in other countries who confine their activities to political agitation, to speeches and demonstration parades, Chinese Communists are armed men fighting the government troops, occupying territories, setting up Soviet form of government and aiming at a complete overthrow of the existing political and economic institutions by terrorism, murder and merciless force.

This is one of the points that has been bothering Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, China's dictator. He also sees that China would court only greater Japanese aggression by entering into an alliance with Russia. It would mean war, the brunt of which would necessarily fall upon China and the Chinese people. This is something immediate and can be expected, whereas the value of a Russian alliance will have to remain a diplomatic "unknown" for some time.

In addition, Gen. Chiang has risen to his present zenith of power in China primarily through his unequivocal anti-Communist policy. A complete reversal would mean nothing less than his stepping out of power. Ever since he assumed control of the Chinese government about eight years ago, he has never made a wrong move on the chessboard of Chinese politics. He is certainly too smart to dig his own ruin this time.

Mr. Hirota, the Japanese Premier and formerly Japan's Foreign Minister, once said that as long as he was in power there would be no war between Russia and Japan. Similarly it may be said that as long as Gen. Chiang Kai-shek remains in power, China will not become an ally of Russia.

This, however, does not mean that Gen. Chiang would yield to Japanese pressure. There is a limit to everything—and in this case, it is the Yellow River. Once the Japanese troops cross the Yellow River, there will be trouble. The Japanese know this and hence they probably will not do anything of the sort for some time, especially when they still have plenty to do to consolidate their recent gains in North China.

Bargain R. R. Trips.

Railroad fares all over the country take a drop June 1. Under a ruling of the I. C. C. (I Cut Carfares) Commission passenger rates will be dropped to 2 cents a mile, five miles for a dime.

• • • •

Whether or not your trip proves a bargain you will be getting it at chain store prices.

• • • •

It now becomes possible for you to make an average railroad trip and have enough left from the former fare to get a chicken sandwich, a couple of joke magazines and a glass of orangeade.

• • • •

The reduction brings railroad fares back where they were 25 years ago. But leaves the railroads wondering more than ever where they are and for how long.

• • • •

You will be able to climb into one of those Pullman car one-passenger chairs, demand a towel for your head and glare superciliously from a clean window for no more than what it used to cost you to share a hard seat with some rug peddler with his shoes off.

• • • •

If you don't want to take any chance on having to move over for a fellow with a garden rake, two rose bushes, a floor lamp and a sack of lawn fertilizer you will find the Pullman within your reach this summer.

• • • •

The railroads, with one exception, are protesting the I. C. C. cut, but it is the Government's contention that lower fares will give the railroads a chance to meet the bus competition. Better a train full of passengers at cut rates than a train a quarter or half full at the old prices, thinks the I. C. C.

• • • •

The railroads seem to stick to the old adage that a fare in the hand is worth two in the bus.

• • • •

Students of transportation hint that the railroads ain't seen nuthin' yet. They say competition by bus, plane and private auto has put the railroads in a position where they must sell themselves to the public. And they predict that movies, orchestras and entertainment units will soon be a feature of service on all smart lines.

• • • •

Who knows? They may ultimately get a railroad dining-car cup of coffee down within the income of the average man.

• • • •

22 Peasants, Guard Are Killed in Clash

Madrid, May 29 (U.P.).—Twenty-two peasants and one civil guard were killed tonight in a clash at the village of Yesta, Albacete Province, a Febus News Agency dispatch from Hellin reported.

Many peasants reportedly were wounded and nine guards injured, two seriously.

The clash reportedly occurred after 50 farm workers attacked the property of former Deputy Edmundo Alfaro, radical, and destroyed 6,000 pine trees. Fourteen leaders of the invasion were arrested.

While they were escorted to prison, other residents of Yesta, armed with guns and farm implements, attacked the civil guards and attempted to release the prisoners.

Stricter Rules For Exchanges Voted in Senate

By the Associated Press.

It approved, 60 to 16, a House bill to extend and broaden the grain-futures act of 1922 and sent it back to the House for approval of Senate amendments.

The measure would transform the present grain futures commission into a commodity exchange commission and give it authority over trading in grains, cotton, rice, mill feeds, potatoes, butter and eggs.

The Secretary of Agriculture, who heads the commission, would be empowered to fix limits on futures trading to prevent excessive speculation in commodities. Legitimate hedging would be exempted.

Enactment of the measure, which was approved by the House last session, was facilitated when the last obstacle to Senate approval—controversial cotton amendments offered by Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina—was removed.

Smith, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, withdrew his amendments, chief of which was one to limit the open position of an individual or firm in the cotton futures market to 600,000 bales a year.

The South Carolina Senator read a letter from Secretary Wallace, who opposed the cotton amendments, promising a study of testimony taken at Smith's 90-day hearing on cotton futures trading upon which he based his proposals.

The Senate listened with amusement as Senator Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, a supporter of the bill, read into the record a partial list of the occupations of 18,783 traders on the Chicago Board of Trade September 29, 1934, a day taken, he said, at random.

Among the traders listed were 17 butchers, 1 cartoonist, 1 Rabbi, 5 priests, 18 unclassified clergymen, 3 Senators, 1 retired Senator, 21 carpenters, and two butlers.

Gibraltar Cheers Selassie's Arrival

Gibraltar, May 29 (AP).—The fugitive Emperor of Ethiopia, Haile Selassie, arrived here today and was greeted with a burst of applause.

The little Negus plainly was unprepared for the cheers which marked his arrival at the Rock Hotel. He quickly recovered his poise, removed his high silk hat and bowed and smiled.

Later he appeared on the balcony and again applause greeted him. He then retired.

He was entertained at the government house at noon with an informal luncheon given by Gov. Sir Charles Harington. Several admirals were among the 23 guests.

He plans to continue to England Sunday as a private citizen, thereby averting possible embarrassment of official England.

President Approves Lynchburg Coin Bill

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a bill authorizing coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the issuance of the charter to the city of Lynchburg, Va., according to the Associated Press.

The bill authorizes the Government to mint up to 20,000 silver 50-cent pieces to be circulated in commemoration of the city's founding.

Ribbentrop, Hitler Aid, Arrives for Irish Visit

Belfast, Northern Ireland, May 29 (AP).—Joachim von Ribbentrop, Adolf Hitler's special ambassador, arrived today for a week-end visit with Lord Londonderry.

(Von Ribbentrop asserts his visit is purely a private one, but diplomats believe the problems created by Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland will be discussed.)

Walt Whitman

By William Lyon Phelps.

Great First Lines.

May 31 is old Walt's birthday; he was born in 1819 and died in 1892, the same year with Tennyson.

It would have pleased Walt Whitman could he have looked into the future and seen the world-wide and ever-growing fame that was to crown his works in the twentieth century. Still I think he felt absolutely assured of permanent renown.

No poet has ever shown a greater talent for first lines. The Table of Contents of his Complete Works is a grand poem—a symphonic poem—in itself.

Of all the verse that he wrote in his own defense none is more beautiful and none more true than this:

Written in Platte Canon, Colo.
Spirit that form'd this scene,
These tumbled rock-piles grim and red,
These reckless heaven-ambitious peaks,
These gorges, turbulent-clear streams, this naked freshness,
These formless wild arrays, for reasons of their own,
I know thee, savage spirit—we have communed together,
Was't charged against my chants they had forgotten art?
To fuse within themselves its rules precise and delicatesse?
The lyric's measur'd beat, the wrought-out temple's grace—column and polish'd arch forgot?
But thou that revelest here—spirit that form'd this scene,
They have remembered thee.

Still Hell Bent

By James P. Warburg

Author of "Hell Bent for Election," Formerly One of President Roosevelt's Financial Advisers.

Chapter Seven.

Unemployment as a Relief Problem.

"Extension of Federal credit to the States to provide unemployment relief wherever the diminishing resources of the States make it impossible for them to provide for the needy."

That is short, clear, and to the point.

The unemployment problem did not suddenly assume vastly greater proportions between the time that Mr. Roosevelt was elected and the time he took office. Nor did the fundamental nature of the problem change.

Why did he change, and, instead of extending the Federal credit to the States as he had promised, decided to have the Federal Government undertake the direct distribution of relief within every State and local subdivision thereof?

Was it because the States had no money?

Hardly. If that were the reason, the mandate of the Democratic platform is clear: the Federal Government would then lend to the States so that they could take care of relief.

Was it because it seemed more economical or efficient to handle the problem that way?

Again, hardly. Why should it be more economical to set up a huge new Federal relief organization when most of the States already had such organizations of their own, and needed only the money to make them function? And why should it be more efficient to have a new, inexperienced organization in Washington set up to handle problems with which the local governments were obviously much more familiar?

Only One Reason—And That's Not Pretty.

Why, then?

It seems difficult to think of any reason but one—and that is not a pretty reason. But this whole chapter in the New Deal history is not a pretty chapter.

If there is any other reason than the desire of the Administration to set up a huge political machine for the purpose of insuring its own re-election this autumn, what is it?

What other possible reason can there be?

Does anybody benefit by it except those who trade in political favors?

If the mandate of the Democratic platform had been carried out, just as many dollars could have been distributed for relief, and probably many more would have reached the recipients.

But—

The recipients would have been grateful in that case to their local or State governments.

As it is, Mr. Farley—who says all this was in the President's mind "before he was even nominated"—as it is, the genial Mr. Farley makes no secret of it that he considers as sure for Mr. Roosevelt the votes of all those who are on relief or employed by the huge Federal bureaucracy.

I happen to disagree with Mr. Farley.

I happen to believe that most Americans go on using their brains to think with independently, even if necessity beyond their control has temporarily robbed them of their economic independence.

But that is beside the point.

What interests us here is what sort of thing Mr. Roosevelt has been "trying," and what sort of thing he will, if re-elected, "go on trying" to do.

That is the first point.

The second point emerges clearly from a speech which the President delivered in Baltimore on April 13, 1936. He said:

"What do we propose to do about the casualties of depression? Since 1929 those casualties in America have run into the millions. They are a charge upon us as a people.

"I have recognized that fact and by every reasonable means we have sought to care for those casualties—to keep them from the physical suffering of hunger; to keep them from the mental suffering of a loss of morale. In regard to all these problems there are counsellors these days who say: 'Do nothing;' other counsellors who say: 'Do everything.' Common sense dictates an avoidance of both extremes. I say to you 'Do something;' and when you have done that something, if it works, do it some more; and if it does not work, do something else."

What the President is here talking about is, of course, the whole "work relief" theory, as against the so-called straight dole. Work relief began with the CWA, continues in a sense through the PWA, and continues likewise today in WPA.

There are really two separte and distinct ideas involved in this program:

CWA and now WPA were created because of the idea that any kind of work—no matter how useless in itself—was better for the morale of the relief workers than a dole.

PWA is the idea of Government spending "to prime the pump."

It seems to me that three questions are here involved:

1. Does the President's relief method protect the people against the mental suffering of a loss of morale?

2. Can the Nation afford the President's relief method?

3. Does the President's method carry with it good or bad consequences as the result of its effect upon the economic life of the country as a whole?

Bearing in mind these three points, let me read you the conclusion stated by Gen. Johnson in his official report as New York City WPA administrator to Harry L. Hopkins:

"Sixty per cent of this invented work is a needlessly expensive and fatuous gesture.

"The only argument is that it preserves pride against the humiliation of home relief, yet to go on work relief the rules require that a man first go on home relief. To get there he must submit to the equivalent of a pauper's oath and a most humiliating inquisition.

"If a man on home relief finds a fugitive dollar in private employment he risks ostracism from any kind of relief.

"It is as cruel as it is stupid, because the area of available relief money nowhere near covers the area of destitution and the vast waste occasioned by this ill-informed dogma subjects the whole Government to amply justified ridicule, and insistence on it not only deprives tens of thousands of people of relief, but involves the Government in more inconsistencies than loyal ingenuity can excuse.

"The money should be disbursed as direct relief except for worthwhile and necessary work on a basis of cost competitive with contemporary public construction.

General's Judgment Taken Lightly, Yet——

That is the considered judgment of a man whose preference is, if anything, in favor of Government regulation and control, and whose conclusions are based upon actual experience as the administrator of Mr. Roosevelt's plan in New York City.

The New Dealers have taken to making light of Gen. Johnson's opinions ever since he has ventured to disagree with some of their policies. But it seems to me—granted that the NRA was a fiasco—that few people have served the Neal Deal more loyally or effectively than the general. Few people have shown greater willingness to carry out the President's idea of "Doing something, and, if it doesn't work, doing something else."

The difference in this case is that the general says, "Do something else," while the President says, "Do it some more."

In any case the general answers the three questions in which we are interested.

1. The President's work relief program does not "protect the people against the mental suffering of a loss of morale." "It is cruel," says the general, "as it is stupid."

2. The Nation cannot afford the President's program. "Sixty per cent of this invented work is a needlessly expensive and fatuous gesture."

3. As to the effects of the work relief program upon the economic life of the Nation, "the vast waste occasioned by this ill-informed dogma not only deprives tens of thousands of people of relief, but involves the Government in more inconsistencies than loyal ingenuity can excuse."

This matter of the work relief idea as opposed to the dole is important because it typifies, perhaps more than any other single issue, the inner conflict which is going on in the minds of the majority of our people.

I confess that my own emotional desire is to agree with the President and avoid the straight dole in order to keep the unemployed not only from physical suffering and hunger, but "from the mental suffering of a loss of morale."

But "the dictates of common sense and common honesty" tell me that the President is wrong. They tell me that the work relief program not only fails to protect the people against a loss of morale, but that it is the largest single factor in preventing the balancing of the budget, in storing up a huge burden of taxation for the future and in retarding recovery and re-employment through natural causes.

Are those of us, who have reluctantly come to this conclusion, any less eager than Mr. Roosevelt to preserve the morale, or to "protect the human values?"

Or are we just looking facts in the face?

The facts that I see are these:

1. The whole administration and distribution of relief should be turned back to the States and localities, where it can be administered with greater knowledge of actual conditions, with greater efficiency, with more economy, and therefore with better results for the unemployed as well as for the taxpayers.

2. "Where the diminishing resources of the States make it impossible for them to provide" the necessary funds out of their own budgets, the Federal Government should make loans to the States.

3. In making these loans the Federal Government should be liberal, but it should firmly discourage—by being not too liberal—unsound fiscal policies by the State governments, wasteful methods of taking care of relief, and—above all—the political capitalization of distress.

4. As to work relief, the Federal Government should say to the States, "It is an appealing idea. We have tried it and we have not been successful. It is more than twice as expensive as a dole, and so we cannot afford it. But the worst of it is that it does not protect the morals of the people as we had hoped, and it does create conditions which materially retard re-employment through the natural processes of recovery.

"That has been our experience with it.

"Perhaps you can do better.

"If you want to try it, and if your people are willing and able to spend the money to try it, that is your affair.

"But, if you want help from the Federal Treasury, then we must insist upon your using the most economical and efficient methods consistent with the needs of your people."

Those are the facts as I see them. They do not mean that any less would be done for those who are in distress. They do not mean that those who advocate such a program would like, as Mr. Roosevelt said, "to dictate to the Government how it shall let people starve."

Would Be Administered More Wisely, Economically.

They mean that, for so long as relief is necessary, it would be administered more wisely and more economically.

They mean that the necessity for relief would disappear sooner—because recovery would be less interfered with.

They mean that relief would be administered by the communities themselves, which is far nearer to the good neighbor idea than delegating our good neighborliness to a Federal bureaucracy run from Washington.

But those facts have not been, and will not, I think, be faced by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley and Mr. Hopkins.

They will not be faced for just one reason:

Because facing them means abandoning the most gigantic political machine and the most gigantic political campaign fund ever created.

That is why I do not believe that "because at least he has tried, and, if re-elected, will go on trying" is any good reason to vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

Personally, I do not think that Mr. Roosevelt was motivated in the first instance by partisan political considerations. I think his ideas about relief grew out of a real sympathy for those in distress and the conviction that he could do a better job in looking after them than would be done by the States and localities.

The idea of a political machine and a political fund probably did not occur to him at first. But it certainly did occur to Mr. Farley. And it certainly must have occurred to Mr. Roosevelt by now.

So much for unemployment as a relief problem.

Perfect Bet: Nominee to Equal Hoover in Each of 7 Counties

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 29.—The perfect election bet was pointed out here today by the American Institute of Public Opinion:

In every one of seven counties the Republican candidate for President this fall will get at least as many votes as Hoover got in those counties four years ago.

You can give 1,000 to 1 on this and not be in danger of losing.

The reason? In those seven counties Roosevelt polled every single vote in 1932.

	1932 Election Roosevelt	Hoover
Franklin Co., Tenn.	3,629	0
Wilkinson Co., Ga.	726	0
Jones Co., Ga.	553	0
Sharkey Co., Miss.	551	0
Miller Co., Ga.	392	0
Quitman Co., Ga.	239	0
Armstrong Co., S. Dak.	17	0

In 1932 there were 18 additional counties in which the Republican vote was between 1 and 6 votes.

	1932 Election Roosevelt	Hoover
Chattahoochee Co., Ga.	186	1
Issquena Co., Miss.	159	1
Perry Co., Ala.	1,382	2
Baker Co., Ga.	647	2
Lincoln Co., Ga.	660	3
Taliafero Co., Ga.	503	3
Lanier Co., Ga.	211	3
King Co., Tex.	224	4
Lancaster Co., S. C.	3,103	5
Colleton Co., S. C.	1,908	5
Marion Co., S. C.	530	5
Echols Co., Ga.	414	5
Webster Co., Ga.	235	5
Lexington Co., S. C.	141	5
Kenedy Co., Tex.	124	5
Fayette Co., Ga.	745	6
Lee Co., Ga.	252	6
Andrews Co., Tex.	185	6

In tomorrow's Washington Post the American Institute of Public Opinion will report Republican sentiment all over the country on such leading candidates for the nomination as Landon, Knox, Borah, Vandenberg, Hoover and Dickinson.

English-Italian Bargain to End Tension Hinted

Baldwin Believed Seeking 'Deal' Aftre Mussolini's Threat to Quit League.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 29.—Government opposition quarters expressed belief tonight that Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin is preparing to "strike a bargain" with Italy to end Anglo-Italian tension.

This belief was sharpened as the cabinet discussed sanctions on the heels of an implied threat by Premier Mussolini to withdraw from the League of Nations if sanctions are not halted.

There were open rumors in House of Commons labor circles that the government is studying the idea of making a "deal with Italy."

Since there is a fortnight of grace before the League Council meets at Geneva June 16, the Cabinet delayed final decisions on sanctions until Parliament reconvenes June 9. Instructions then will be given Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

Official quarters reiterated the position that Britain's interest in the Italo-Ethiopia dispute is entirely dictated by her League membership and she will do no more or less than other members of the League.

The Laborite newspaper Daily Herald, reacting cooly to Mussolini's latest bid for Britain's friendship, said: "One thing is wanted * * * a resolute British policy. Given that, it is still possible despite past failure to win a victory for the League and for peace.

"Is there still hope for courage in Downing street or will this once proud country under the present leadership betray the world by vacillation, lethargy and indecision?"

Anne Heath, Mrs. Deahl Visit Here

Capital Visitor Says She Was Pushed Into the Movies.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

It is all her grandmother's fault that Miss Anne Carter Heath, now a guest in Washington, began her career in the movies. Far from disapproving, her grandmother, being of a family prominently identified with the theater, decided her young granddaughter would be a success in pictures, and took steps to launch her into the profession.

Miss Heath and her aunt, Mrs. Benjamin F. Deahl, of Goshen, Ind., are staying at the George Washington Inn to be near their friends, Representative and Mrs. S. B. Pettengill, who reside tnere.

Miss Heath was born in New York, but spent her girlhood in California. She was graduated from Hollywood High School and the University of Southern California. Her uncle, the late Lincoln J. Carter, noted author and producer of "The Fast Mail," "The Flaming Arrow," "The Heart of Chicago" and 20 or 30 other plays and pictures, always said she was the one member of the family who would make a success in the theater.

Her grandmother observed the movies with one professional eye, and kept the other on her granddaughter. When she thought Miss Anne was ready to make her screen debut, she gathered up some of her photographs, sent them to Mack Sennett, and it was in his company the very young actress began her career.

Joined Warner Bros.

After a year and a half there, she became Bobbie Vernon's leading lady and then went to Warner Bros. Studio, making records and shorts for several years.

She left the movies to devote herself to singing, preferring a career in music to that in pictures, and for the past four years has been engaged in concert and radio work, combined with study. Miss Heath, who is a soprano, worked with Mme. Guerriere in Hollywood and Miriam Ward in Cleveland and expects to continue her study in New York, where she will go after her visit in the Capital.

She came here for a holiday of several weeks after radio engagements in New York, including several as guest artist on a well-known commercial program. No sooner had she arrived than a message from Cleveland summoned her there for a broadcast. She protested she was having a vacation—"without a song"—but it did no good and she finally agreed to make the trip there and back by plane. At the airport, on her return, she met John Boles, who was coming here to appear in connection with his picture, and they renewed the friendship made when they sang together in Warner Bros. shorts.

While she was in pictures, Miss Heath was voted the prettiest girl in the studios and held the title of "Miss Hollywood" for a season.

Doesn't Like Winter.

Yesterday, bewailing Washington's winter weather in May, she wore a high-necked white sweater under a tailored suit of gray-blue which suggested the color of her eyes. A deep dimple played in her right cheek as she talked and her smile revealed even white teeth. Her blonde hair was curled closely at the neck and in a single curl on top which curved over her forehead at one side.

She is small, quick in her movements and straightforward and frank in her manner. She likes riding and has been doing some of it during her stay here and enjoys other outdoor sports. She has spent her time chiefly in sightseeing during her visit in the Capital and says she has seen nearly everything but the Lincoln Memorial. She was in Williamsburg for a week-end, and felt there "like a modern person walking down the pages of history."

She and Mrs. Deahl leave Monday for a motor trip to North Carolina and expect to return to Washington a short time before going to New York. Miss Heath has sung but once since she has been here but hopes to come back next season for a concert in the Capital.

Capt. Claude O. Burch To Wed Lora Barwick

Mrs. J. M. Barwick, of Sumter, S. C., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Lora Barwick, of Washington, to Capt. Claude O. Burch, U. S. A. The wedding will take place at noon, July 9, in the chapel of Fort Myer, where Capt. Burch is stationed.

After the wedding, he and his bride will live in Fort Riley, Kans., where Capt. Burch has been transferred.

To Visit in Orient.

Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed will leave Washington June 8 for a stay in Hawaii, after which she will continue on to Japan and China, where she will make an extended visit with friends.

Miss Shirley Blackney, daughter of Representative and Mrs. W. W. Blackney, of Michigan, entertained at luncheon Tuesday at the Dodge in honor of her guest, Miss Mary Louise Green, of Flint, Mich. Others in the party included Miss Charlotte King, Miss Elizabeth Michener, Miss Fanchon Aldrich, Miss Margaret Rich, Miss Betty Lou Massingale and Miss Ruth Reed.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Schenck, accompanied by Dr. Kenneth D. Miller, of Madison, N. J., are at the Dodge en route by motor to Maryville, Tenn., to attend graduation exercises of Maryville College, of which Mr. Schenck is a trustee.

Dr. and Mrs. R. Stevens Pendexter will entertain at tea tomorrow in honor of Stonewall Jackson Chapter, U. D. C., of which Mrs. Pendexter has been president for two years.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Countess Laszlo Szechenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister to London, who has reopened her Newport home for the summer, was in Washington for a few days this week, having come to see her newest grandchild, daughter of her daughter Cornelia, whose marriage to Mr. Eugene B. Roberts was a brilliant event of a few seasons ago.

The Countess, who was Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, of New York City, has many Washington friends made in her long residence here during her husband's diplomatic service. She was the guest of honor at several luncheons while in Washington.

Grandchildren are a powerful attraction for a grandmother. Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, of Washington and Newport, who recently opened her villa, Harrison House, in the latter city, for the season, has taken time out from the social program to go to London to see hers, the children of Mrs. Drummond Hunt, who as Miss Margaret Snowden Fahnestock, was a popular debutante of Washington. Mrs. Drummond Hunt's brother, Col. Snowden Fahnestock, World War hero, recently married Mrs. Beatrice Beck Tuck, daughter of the late James M. Beck and Mrs. Beck.

Mrs. Fahnestock was accompanied abroad by her cousin, Miss Dorothy P. Sollers, of Baltimore. They will return to Newport early in July, to remain until Mrs. Fahnestock reopens her house here after the November elections.

Speaking of London, the Capital read with interest yesterday that one of its former residents, Mrs. Ernest Simpson, formerly Miss Wallis Warfield, cousin of Mrs. George Barnett, and her husband were among the guests at a state dinner given by King Edward VIII earlier in the week. The Simpsons are prominent members of the King's set. If King Edward is anxious about the future of his kingdom, he might ask Mrs. Simpson to gaze into the huge crystal ball, which is one of her most cherished possessions and accompanies her everywhere. While Mrs. Simpson is not addicted to superstition to any marked degree, she has a certain faith in that crystal ball and is said to consult it on all important occasions.

By the way, what the fates portend this summer and fall, politically and otherwise, might be discovered in the crystal-gazing ball which reposes on the mantel of the Monroe room, the family living room on the second floor of the White House. This mystic ball is about the size of an orange and is held in an ornate bronze scroll leaf base, exquisite in craftmanship.

It is not known, of course, whether or not the President or Mrs. Roosevelt ever engage in crystal ball gazing. But it is a craze that seizes people in cycles. Judging from the number of magic balls one sees about the city in interesting homes just now, crystal gazing must be in the vogue once more.

To Sail for Europe Soon

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. James J. Davis Noted for "Philadelphia Pepper Pot."

By Pattie Ellicott.

SENATOR and Mrs. James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, and their family of interesting children, all of whose names begin with the letter "J," usually spend their summers on the Davis farm in Pennsylvania.

Back home in the Keystone State Mrs. Davis tries out the native dishes of the region and is an expert in making them. There is always joy in the Davis household when an old culinary stand-by of the State, "Philadelphia Pepper Pot," is on the menu.

MRS. JAMES J. DAVIS.

Philadelphia Pepper Pot.

2 pounds honeycomb tripe
2 pounds plain tripe
½ pound beef suet
1 knuckle of veal
1 bunch pot herbs
4 medium-sized potatoes
1 large onion
1 bay leaf
Salt and cayenne pepper to season
2 cups flour for dumplings

Wash thoroughly both varieties of tripe, place in kettle and cover with water. Boil eight hours; remove tripe and when cooled cut into pieces about one-half inch square. Next wash veal knuckle, cover with about three quarts of water and bring to the simmering point, removing scum as it rises. Continue for three hours. Remove meat from bones and cut into small pieces to be placed in broth later. Strain broth and return to kettle.

Add one chopped onion and bay leaf and simmer one hour, then add four medium-sized potatoes cut in squares. Also pot herbs, red pepper cut in half. Then add meat and tripe and season with salt. (If desired hot, use a pinch of cayenne pepper). Make dumplings from one cup finely chopped beef suet, mixed with two cups flour and a pinch of salt. Moisten with enough cold water to permit rolling into dumplings, size of small marbles. Flour well to prevent sticking and drop into soup, simmer a few minutes, add parsley and serve at once.

For Love or Money

By ROB EDEN

Brenda Fayre, 22, has become involved in a world of lies because of her loyalty to her invalid sister, Lally, who cannot walk. To support Lally and earn enough to afford an operation which may enable her to walk, Brenda has accepted a job as "siren" for Walter Jason, salesman of questionable mining stock. In a few months Brenda has saved enough money from her commissions to pay for Lally's operation. Brenda keeps secret the sort of "work" she is doing as an entertainer of Jason's "customers."

Brenda realizes that Lally has fallen in love with their neighbor, Val Sargent, brilliant young writer who has been kind to Lally largely because he, in turn, loves Brenda. But Brenda, because she knows Lally's secret, has put Val out of her mind. To make it easier to avoid him she accepts from Jason a diamond, which she wears on her third finger, telling Lally she is engaged to her employer. Lally passes this news on to Val.

The ruse succeeds and Lally is kept in ignorance of the heartbreak that awaits her up to the eve of her trip to the hospital.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE.

Lally lay very quietly so she wouldn't awaken Brenda. She often pretended she was asleep, because she didn't want to worry her sister. Tonight it was hard staying still, because she wanted to fling out her arms, scream into the darkness. Scream for joy—and yet all evening she had forced herself to go on as if tomorrow were an ordinary day, a day like all other days. When tomorrow was so glorious! When tomorrow was going to be the most wonderful day she had ever known!

Well—not exactly that, but the second most wonderful. The first was the day Peter had flown up to Val's typewriter, and Val had come down with her bird.

That day—and tomorrow. In a few moments, tomorrow would be today.

At midnight—one minute after midnight, tomorrow would be today. Ten o'clock when she had gone to bed, 10:30 when Brenda had joined her—

Perhaps half an hour before she had heard the regular rhythmic breathing that told her her sister was asleep. That made 11. And she must have been lying here a long time listening to the clock, and waiting for tomorrow to be today.

Sometimes in the night if it was clear, the chimes from a far-off church could be heard faintly. Several times in the past—she had heard them, and she was listening for them tonight. Listening for the chimes that would ring in the new day.

"The new day, Lally Fayre, your new life," she whispered to herself.

For three days knowing that Doctor Koenig was in the city, seeing his name in the newspapers. Waiting, and today Doctor Pierce calling and asking her to come down tomorrow at 9 o'clock. Trying to keep calm when he told her, trying to keep calm all the day after that—trying to be calm when Brenda came home—

Counted Minutes.

For a while she tried counting the minutes with the ticking clock, tapping them out with her right hand on her left wrist. One, two, three, four, and on and on, until she had five minutes of them, 60 times 5. But she found that when she was counting, she couldn't listen so well, and she was afraid of missing the chimes.

Brenda moved restlessly, and Lally held her breath for a moment. It was while she was taut listening for Brenda's next movement, afraid that she would wake up, that she heard the tinkle of far-off chimes.

"It's today, Val," she murmured, looking up at the ceiling which was the floor of Val's bedroom. "And I'm to see Doctor Koenig today, and he's going to tell me that he can operate, and I'll be all right. That I can walk, and dance and run. You don't know yet about Doctor Koenig, but you will tomorrow night when I tell you."

Tears rushed to her eyes, washed down her cheeks, but she didn't wipe them away. They weren't the bitter tears she had been shedding for so long—by herself in the darkness when Brenda was fast asleep, and no one would know about them but herself. These were tears of joy, although they scalded her eyes.

"Now, you mustn't get too excited," Dr. Pierce had said over the telephone. "And you mustn't get too optimistic—"

"I won't," she had promised faithfully, but the promise meant nothing when she pledged it, and was forgotten immediately. Wasn't her life built on Dr. Koenig, and his decision? All her hope, and future? She was confident what that decision would be. She knew.

Worried.

Brenda didn't know, and Lally could see that she was worried. They hadn't mentioned the trip they were going to take all evening, after their plans were made, but Lally could see the nervousness of her sister, the nervousness she was trying so hard to hide.

"In no time at all, I'll be walking, Val," she said still gazing at the ceiling. "I won't know how at first, and you and Brenda will have to teach me. Just as you would teach a baby. This foot forward, that foot, balance yourself carefully, Lally, or you'll fall. Like the baby we saw in the park the other day. Remember? We laughed because it was having such a time learning to walk. That's the way I'll be."

The edge of sleep came, that delicious edge, not quite here and not quite there, when dreams seem so real. Lally saw herself sitting in a chair, not her wheel chair, but another chair that had been at home when she was a child.

A walnut, graceful chair, with a seat and back of slippery horse hair, the arms delicately carved, and the frame circling the back, carved, too. She could even see the slender feet, bowed a little as if the weight of the chair was too heavy. She was sitting on the chair, and on her feet were slim red pumps like Brenda's black ones, and on her legs were sheer chiffon hose.

The next moment she was standing, and then she walked across the room. The room was not the Corwin living room, but her mother's bedroom—in the house in which they had lived when their father was alive. Although she had not thought of the room for years, had not been in it for 12 years, she saw very clearly the bed with its crisp dimity spread, the hooked rugs on the floor, the fireplace with the coals glowing in the hearth, and the two brass candlesticks, one on each side of the mantle.

Grandfather Clock.

From the room, she walked into the hall, which was familiar, too, with its curving staircase, and the slippery uncarpeted steps.

She heard the heels of her red pumps clicking on the bare steps as she went down. There was no fear going down these steps, only exhaltation. There was no remembrance that she had once fallen down them, and had lain for a time after her fall before the grandfather clock, and for months later in her mother's bedroom. There was no remembrance that after her fall, she had never walked again. It was as if she had never fallen.

Half way down the stairs, the red pumps mysteriously changed to tiny jeweled sandals, exactly like the ones she had seen this week in a fashion magazine.

The short dress vanished and became a long white chiffon gown.

She could feel the skirt whirling around her ankles; she could feel the slight pinch of the pearl earrings in her ears. Val was at the bottom of the stairs looking up at her. They smiled into each other's eyes, and she passed the clock without seeing it, and in a moment was in his arms. And there was music and she was dancing. The music was low, it was playing a waltz, and she was dancing with her head on Val's shoulder, and her eyes closed. They were quite alone in the room which had been her mother's living room. The floor was cleared, and very slippery, and Val's arms felt so strong. They were tightening around her. Her lips felt his against hers.

And he was whispering in her ear, "I love you so, darling!" she was repeating after him, "I love you so, darling!"

Envoy of Peace Enrolls Women Of Latin Lands

Central America, Mexico Back Mandate, Says Eloise Brainerd.

PUBLICIZING a program for international peace in Central America has been the recent work of Eloise Brainerd, who has just returned to Washington from a three months' visit to Panama, Costa Rica, Salvador, Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala and Mexico.

Chairman of the Latin-American committee of the People's Mandate to End War, and also of the Inter-American committee of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, Miss Brainerd went on a joint mission to establish the work of these two organizations throughout Central America and Mexico.

Yesterday she told something of what has been accomplished for both groups since she left Washington in February. Visiting the capital of each Central American republic, she organized a peace committee, headed by women, "although men were also much interested in this work," she said. With these committees as a nucleus, subsidiary groups were established in other cities, and these, in turn, organized committees to cover smaller towns and rural districts.

"In this way, every person in Central America and Mexico will be given an opportunity to learn of the work of both the People's Mandate to End War and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom," she said.

Many Eager for Peace.

Lecturing in schools and universities before women's groups and men's arganizations Miss Brainerd obtained many signatures for the People's Mandate during her visit. "I don't know exactly how many—haven't had a chance to count them yet—but I do know men and women and boys and girls over 16 were eager to add their names to the long list of those who want permanent international peace," she averred.

"Natives of those countries really take to the idea more readily than the average person in the United States. Everywhere I talked, the response was encouraging. Men, as well as women, not only listened with interest, but were eager to promote peace work."

In Central America and in Panama she had the double task of organizing women's groups and launching the peace programs. "In those countries, the woman's club, as we are familiar with it in this country, is comparatively unknown. Women individually, however, are emerging from purely domestic pursuits in growing numbers, and apparently are eager to increase their stature in public life. Peace work gives them this opportunity. With women teachers leading the way, housewives and mothers are standing strongly behind both the People's Mandate and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Such activity is developing their power of organization, giving them the chance to the strength of group activity, and also enlisting their support in a dual program to end war."

Mexican Groups Organized.

In Mexico, where women's organizations already are well under way, Miss Brainerd's task was chiefly to explain the principles and program of the two peace groups with which she is connected.

"Once they were informed of the importance of this work, they began their own program to carry it on," she said. "As in Central America, they were very much interested in standing behind a movement to insure international peace."

Hair Treatment In Early Years Is Important

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THERE MAY come a time when the differentiation between men and women will be greater than it now is, and biologists discussing the race will give baldness as a distinguishing characteristic of the adult male of the species.

The real secret of the trouble probably lies in the neglect of boys' hair as compared with the attention which is given to girls'. No one objects to baldness in a man, but a bald woman is invariably subjected to unpleasant comment.

From the time a girl baby is born her mother begins to train and treat her hair. She encourages it to curl, washes and massages it, and personally supervises its care until she can safely trust the girl herself to continue the good work.

Few mothers do as much for a boy. As soon as infancy is over and the boy has begun to take his own baths his hair is forgotten. He is supposed to wash it in his bath or under the shower at school. But no one looks to see whether he does, or notices whether he has dandruff, or inquires whether he uses soap, and if so whether he is careful to rinse it all out.

The average boy does not think of these things. He never pays any attention to washing his head or brushing his hair, or loosening his scalp, and accepts falling hair and dandruff as an inevitable evil. It is the first 10 years of life that count most in the preservation and beauty of hair, and during these years mothers should tend a boy's hair quite as much as a girl's.

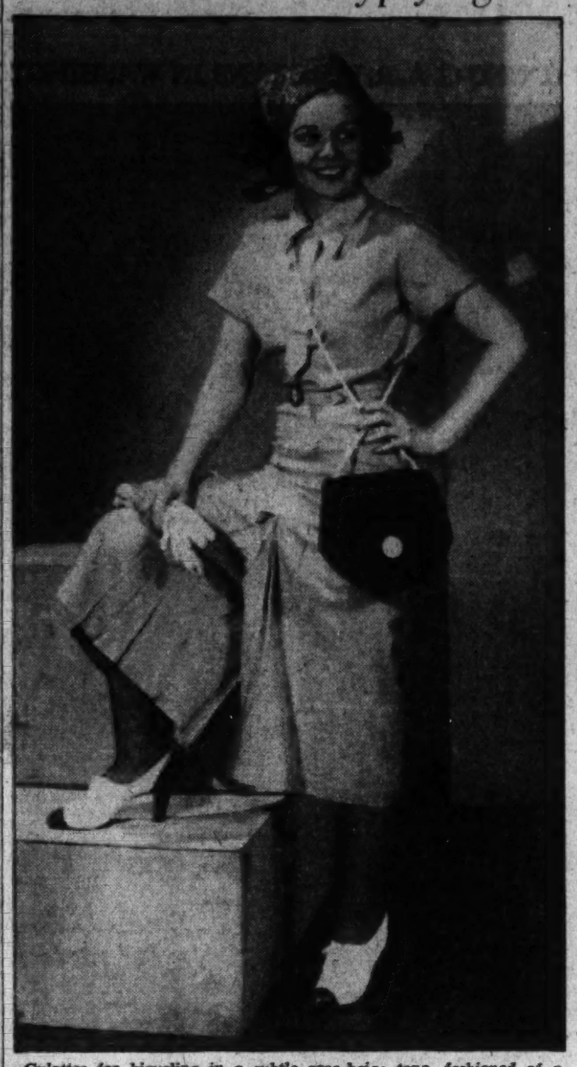
Whining Women Annoy Men, Says Charm Authority

American women, who have deliberately encouraged men to treat them like pieces of furniture in order to stress the "equality idea" now spend too much energy being offended for slights against their femininity, says Margery Wilson, charm expert.

"Men will not be uncomfortable around women," declares Miss Wilson. "They have a wonderful capacity for going to war and getting themselves killed for their country, but let a woman complain, and they're off.

"Women oughtn't to suffer like they do. They persecute themselves with fears that they'll be old maids. The calendar is a bugaboo—from the time she's 20 every woman is obsessed with the idea of getting up that aisle before curfew rings."

Culottes for Gypsying



Culottes for bicycling in a subtle rose-beige tone, fashioned of a new linen material, are exceedingly smart when accompanied by a brown linen bicycle bag which swings from the neck on a white cord. The gay bandana in brilliant colors on a brown background, tied around the head gypsy fashion, also enhances the effect. White fabric gloves stitched in brown and sports shoes of white buckskin and brown leather complete the dashing ensemble. For information call The Post Fashion Editor, NAtional 4200, Branch 323.

Culotte Gets Down to Business And 'Goes to Town' in Real Way!

Costume Idea Combining Comfort of Trousers and Grace of Skirts Presents Popular Style That Can Be Amazingly Individual.

THE OMNIPRESENT culotte now goes shopping and even to business, as well as bicycling, golfing and to the beach! This clever idea of a costume, which has all the comfort and practicality of trousers and the grace and conservative appearance of a skirt, has taken precedence over all other spectator sports clothes this summer. Almost every day a new version makes its appearance—new materials, different styling. Practically every neckline that is obtainable in the sports type of frock has been borrowed by the culotte. Both solid colors and prints are available, and the trousered-skirt may be plain or pleated, according to the choice of the wearer.

Starting out as just a clever idea, the culotte now is in the realm of costumes that demand accompanying accessories. Colorful bandannas in lieu of a hat; cotton visors of various and divers shapes; berets, swagger or coolie sun hats; when bicycling, a handbag which swings around the neck from a cord; sports gloves to harmonize with the material of the culotte, or bicycle gloves with specially designed; palms; novelty belts and scarfs to accompany the street type of culotte, are all tremendous trifles which may make or break the general effect.

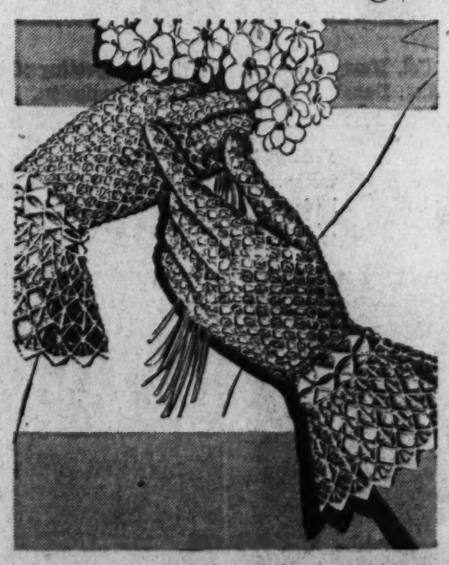
Since young America has gone so completely culotte-conscious, no self-respecting summer wardrobe can be called adequate without several interpretations of this unusually popular style of dress. And the Washington stores and shops have such a varied collection one can be amazingly individual, even when adopting a fashion which may seem almost a uniform.

For beach wear, if one wants to acquire a lot of sun-tan, there are culottes, consisting of the separate trousered-skirt, with which is worn a halter top. These are not only practical, but give the wearer a grand chance to plan a number of startling color schemes; solid color culottes and patterned halters, such as dramatic prints and nautical designs. Or, gaily patterned culottes and halter tops repeating one of the tones in the design of the culotte, are equally effective.

Chinese Charms Unique Note on Leather Bags

Paris (AP).—With summer around the corner white kid bags and belts appear in shops and shop windows. Some of the newest have Chinese charms, one to dangle from the belt, another for active service as the bag opener and closer. Colored leather butterflies decorate others. Three of them, in tan, black and red are posed with wings spread on a white kid belt.

Lacy Mesh Gloves Are Cool And Fresh; Have Finger Ease



By Alice Brooks.

New Interests At Middle Age Aid Longevity

Simple Living and Plain Eating Also Are Factors.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Factors Influence Longevity.

There are but few persons who, barring accident, cannot attain a long and happy life. The trouble is that we are not willing to pay the price, to care for our bodies as nature intended we should. We may be in good health at the moment and, all too frequently, we are inclined to look upon it as a permanent possession—one that will never be taken away.

A few centuries ago the average span of life was only eight years; today it is nearly 58. As most of us know, little progress has been made in the conquest of the diseases incident to middle or late life. The present increase in longevity can be attributed to the victory over epidemic diseases, particularly those which attack infancy, childhood, and youth. No one would wish to prolong life much beyond the period when reasonable serenity and comfort can be assured. This emphasizes the necessity for the intensive investigation of those disable afflictions that attack mentally alert men and women in the most productive period—middle age.

Heart Ills Head List

Of all the killers, heart disease heads the list. We may decrease suffering and disability from this single cause by better care and more attention to rheumatic infections which occur in childhood and in early adult years. Could we remove the baneful effects of rheumatic fever from our midst 70 per cent of all heart disease would be prevented.

Why is it desirable that men and women shall live at least from twenty to thirty years beyond middle life (age 45)? The reason is obvious. Youth and early manhood and womanhood, despite its enthusiasm, its "go," its intelligence, and its knowledge, lacks wisdom. Cut life short and we will miss sadly the creations of ripened thought. Because society needs mature judgement so desperately, we cannot with complacency view the wrecking of efficiency that accompanies the unhygienic habits of those who are beginning to think.

Overeating Serious

Overeating places so severe a strain upon vital organs that sooner or later disease will gain the ascendancy. Overexercise and overwork will damage the circulation, and apoplexy comes because of weakened blood vessel walls. High blood pressure announces itself because of stress, strain, worry, hurry and improper elimination, and in turn damages the kidneys and the heart.

With but a minimum amount of attention to health, productivity will not lessen at 60 or even 70. Among many of our greatest minds we find examples of carefully regulated modes of living. Kant, who lived frugally, reached the age of 80. Alexander von Humboldt was 90 at the time of his death; Isaac Newton was 84, as was Herschel, the astronomer. Goethe and Victor Hugo died at 83. Titian died of plague at 90; Michelangelo at 89, and Tintoretto at 82.

Every one must have an occupation, a vocation, or an avocation. The one who retires from business is rarely happy unless he can interest himself in something of value to his community. The man or woman in middle life who has not learned how to rest, or play, or take some form of recreation deserves our sympathy. I know scores of men past 60 who will live 20 or more years if they can view their personal affairs with complacency and adopt a philosophy of life that takes the good with the bad, without undue elation or depression.

But let us not be anxious about life. It takes away zest and proves a veritable killjoy.

Bridal Customs Date to Cave Days

New York (AP).—The bridesmaids, marriage rings and showers of rice which mark the modern bride's wedding day originate in customs dating all the way from cave men to knights of the middle ages.

Centuries ago marriage by capture was the rule. Primitive man stole his bride from a neighboring tribe and carried her off to his cave, regarding her as a trophy that attested to his courage and prowess.

The suave best man and colorful bridesmaids, who will take part in weddings this June, are believed to be survivals of the days when the would-be bridegroom's friends helped him make his "getaway" with his prize and the bride's relatives tried to prevent the theft.

The wedding ring tradition is also credited to prehistoric days. Though its real origin is unknown, many authorities believe it dates from the ancient custom of primitive man to weave a cord and bind it around the waist of the woman he wanted, in the belief that her spirit entered his body when the rite was performed.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman Teacher Would Go to South or Central America as Children's Tutor or Paying Guest.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am wondering if, through your good column, I can contact an American family going to live in a Spanish-speaking country. I would like to go to South or Central America to study and gain fluent command of the Spanish language. I know the conditions there and I know that it is better for an American woman to know people before going into a Latin country. I thought in this Capital City that I might be able to make a contact that would be of value to me and perhaps to someone else.

• • • •

I am willing to teach the children of the family for the opportunity or I am willing to go as a paying guest. A teacher has to manage these long summers well, you know. It is my idea that I might contact a very nice family by acting as tutor. If there is such a family in Washington would you forward their correspondence to me? Thanking you, I am, very sincerely, AMBITIOUS.

DEAR AMBITIOUS: Miracles do happen. It is just possible the publication here of your letter will attract the attention of the sort of family you visualize, who could use the services of a governess or who would be willing to take along a paying guest to South or Central America. I shall be glad to forward any correspondence which your appeal may draw. M. H.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE WERE AGHAST at the courage of our cousin who has two of the rowdiest little boys we ever saw. She had her living room done over in the loveliest satin upholsteries . . . selected a Kirkmanshah patterened rug on an ivory ground and otherwise made the room anything but the sort of a place you'd expect to bring two boys like hers up in.

"It would be terribly impractical," she agreed, "if it weren't for the fact that we're bringing up the children on the theory that there should be certain things in the house for them to respect and keep nice. We have plenty of room other places for them to romp to their hearts' content. But in the living room they have to behave like gentlemen. The same thing is true of our dining room. Certainly light green chair seats and a peach carpet are anything but the things you'd expect to find where there are two boys the age of ours. But look how well they've kept it . . . the room hasn't been refreshed since we decorated it. Furthermore, we never have let them eat on anything but nice linen . . . they have had to learn not to spill their food. It seemed to us to be better training.

"On the other hand, look at their playroom, their own bedroom, the sun parlor, the library . . . all sturdy dog-eared rooms where they need have no inhibitions about playing and scuffling and banging around."

And that's not such a bad idea, come to think about it. Although a lady would have to be rather strong-minded to enforce such a program. Our cousin is, so it works. And we must say that even though her boys do have their rowdy times, they are all well mannered and beautifully behaved when the time comes.

Tip for "Nurse Girl."

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Several days ago you published a letter from a girl who signed herself "Lonely Nurse Girl," asking where she could make friends. I wish to say to this girl that if she will go to the Y. W. C. A., at Seventeenth and K streets northwest, and talk to Miss Saida Hartman, she will be introduced to other girls doing similar work.

• • • •

The Y. W. C. A. has a room set aside expressly for industrial department, and all domestic workers can find company there and perhaps friends. Everyone is most kind, and on Wednesdays and Thursdays particularly, girls gather there and Miss Hartman arranges various social affairs for their entertainment. As you know, the Y. W. C. A. is nonsectarian and all sects are equally welcome. Hoping this will help "Lonely Nurse Girl" and other girls who do not know where to turn for friends, I am very truly yours, (MISS) L. JONES.

• • • •

DEAR MISS JONES: Thank you for this suggestion. I am sure "Lonely Nurse Girl" will appreciate the interest you have shown in her appeal, and it may be you have here shown other girls the way to find the friends they need. With regard to "Lonely Nurse Girl," however, I am happy to say that through this column and as a result of her appeal, she has been the recipient of offers of friendship from nearly a dozen young women locally employed in capacities similar to hers. M. H.

Has Skin Trouble.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read your answers to problems daily and thoroughly enjoy them. I am hoping you will be able to help me. I have been troubled the past few years with a poor complexion, meaning pimples and blackheads. Recently I found a temporary job with the Government and would appreciate it if you would advise me of a skin specialist who would charge a reasonable fee, as I can not afford to pay much. The reason is that I send money home to my parents each week.

• • • •

My complexion is a drawback to me socially and, in the past, I am sure, it has hindered me in finding a position. May I read your answer as soon as is convenient? Sincerely. MISS. I. R.

• • • •

DEAR MISS I. R.: The answer to just such a question as this has been stated here at least twice during the past month. The Medical Dental Service, located in the Health Security Building, Eighth and I streets northwest, aids persons in circumstances such as yours in securing medical treatment, to be paid for on the deferred payment plan and at fees to fit the patient's purse. Telephone MEtropolitan 3900 and talk with Miss Josephine J. Schindel, assistant medical social worker. Your case will be given prompt attention. As an alternative, you might call the Physicians and Surgeons Exchange, WIsconsin 3053, and ask the names of local skin specialists whose fees are moderate. It is against the policy of this column to publicly recommend any one private practitioner as against any other. M. H.

Secrets of Good Talk

WHAT A REFRESHING thing and hour of conversation can be! And what a bore—when a lively discussion degenerates into a quarrelsome argument!

"Aw, I did not say that!" "But can'tcha understand anything?" "Well, what's the big idea?" "It was right there in the paper, don'tcha ever read anything?"

People who make the air ring with that kind of rude remarks will have mighty few friends. No invitations from cultivated people. Their conversation is a stubling-block when it might be the ladder to success.

"I didn't make my idea very clear." "No doubt you noticed that article in the paper." "Well, of course that's one way of looking at it." These are courteous phrases which keep discussions friendly.

If you know a subject is a trouble-maker, avoid it. Choose common, entertaining topics—tell how kitty nibbled the tips off the asparagus when the minister came to dinner; ask Mrs. Briggs to tell you how to make sherbet, and inquire of young Robbie what luck he has getting distant stations with short wave radio. Give people a chance to shine in talk with you, and you'll win fame as a marvelous talker yourself!

Learn this graceful art of friendly talk. Our 40-page booklet, "Improving Your Conversation," is full of hints. Topics, voice, tact, poise, skill in small talk—all interestingly discussed. A real social life-saver.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Improving your conversation," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Most Successful Mother Must Have Poise, Strength

Who is the most successful mother you know?

A great variety of types will come to mind. But if mothers are to be judged by their children and also by their own usefulness and joy in life, Rhoda Bacmeister writes in Parents' Magazine that there really is only one answer. Here it is:

"The most successful mother is a woman of poise and strength, a woman who can accept and discharge responsibilities without becoming nervous or harried or losing her zest in the adventure of life. She has achieved a sense of proportion which enables her to see the difficulties everyone encounters in bringing up children for what they are, passing phases quite unimportant beside the main purpose of family life."

How a Baby Grows

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

Standing Part Two

THE BABY STANDS—The ability to stand comes by slow degr ees. The pictures below show the growing baby at the age of 40 weeks. Now, he likes to stand, holding onto the side of his crib. He lifts one foot and then the other, but stays on one spot. Later, he learns to cruise around the crib, using hands to assist feet. Senate Gets Bill on Repeal Of Red Rider

Walsh Places Measure on Calendar; D. C. to Have Another Day.

Senator Gives 6 Reasons Why Blanton Statute Should Be Erased.

The Wheeler bill to repeal the "red rider" was placed on the Senate calendar yesterday by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, as a local civic delegation was told by Speaker Byrns that Congress will not adjourn before June 8, when the District is entitled to another legislative day in the House.

Representative Sisson (Democrat), of New York, consequently will work toward the aim of bringing his repeal measure to a vote a week from Monday and of forestalling efforts to deprive the District of the day.

Senator Walsh, reporting for the Committee on Education and Labor, cited six reasons why the "red rider" should be repealed. Briefly, they are:

Six Reasons.

1. So District school children may learn "the facts" on every economic or political system.
2. To remove the "unjust stigma" upon Washington school teachers.
3. Because it is unfair to the Board of Education.
4. It is out of harmony with the American tradition of freedom of speech and teaching.
5. The rider is futile, as pro-communistic teachers could evade it.
6. It serves as "a bad example for the Legislatures of our several States."

"The greatest danger to education lies in the attempt, under the guise of patriotism, to suppress freedom of speech, teaching, inquiry and discussion," the report stated.

Fears Extension.

"If statutes such as this are enacted, it would not be long before similar encroachments were imposed upon teachers in private schools, and then be extended to require that such teachers shall not teach any particular kind of religion, or the principles of any political parties.

"The opposition to the 'red rider' provision is based upon grounds that relate in no way to the merits or demerits of doctrines that are obnoxious to every member of the committee.

"If the Senate supports the view of the committee and this law is repealed, the Board of Education will have full responsibility, which it should militantly exercise, in preventing the use of radical textbooks in the schools and the employment of teachers inculcating subversive doctrines into the minds of the school children of Washington.

School Bus Service Assured to Cripples

A group of anonymous benefactors yesterday came to the aid of the 80 crippled children who have been deprived of bus service to school since Wednesday.

The buses will start operating Monday morning and continue their routes for the rest of the school term, regardless of Congress' action on the deficiency bill, Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou announced yesterday. Buses, carrying the physically handicapped boys and girls to special classes at Weightman and Magruder Schools, were stopped May 27 because the Board of Education needed a $1,350 appropriation in the deficiency bill to pay for the service.

Dr. Ballou said he accepted the offer of "some public-spirited people" to pay for the bus transportation.

"The persons making this offer asked that their names be kept in confidence," the superintendent said.

The Citizens Joint Committee on National Representation yesterday presented duplicate copies of a petition, renewing the annual plea for national representation for the District, to the Senate and to the House.

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, stanch champion of the fight for the right to vote for Washingtonians, made a brief talk in presenting the petition to the Senate. Speaker Byrns merely acknowledged it in the absence of Representative Mary T. Noarton, chairman of the House District Committee.

The petition asked Congress to pass the joint resolution, sponsored by Mrs. Norton and Senator Capper, to give the residents of the National Capital the same franchise rights and the same representation in Congress as are accorded citizens of the several States. It would require a constitutional amendment.

Both Senator Capper and Mrs. Norton have pledged themselves to seek to incorporate the proposal in the platforms of the Republican and Democratic parties, respectively.

"These voteless and unrepresented Americans are politically in a most difficult position," Senator Representative Mary T. Norton, Capper said, "completely lacking any participation in the councils of the Nation. Their situation has been particularly distressing during the present session of Congress.

"They are absolutely dependent upon the Congress for all legislation and for the appropriation of funds, which are raised in greater part from their own taxation, for the support of the District.

"This is particularly true at the present time, when there is a serious disagreement between the two houses, and there is no adequate remedy which these voiceless and unrepresented ones can apply."

Xanten New Head Of Refuse Division

William Xanten, 31-year-old acting superintendent of the refuse division, yesterday was made chief of that division by the District Commissioners.

Fund for Boys Club Is Swelled to $49,351

The Police Boys Club fund climbed to $49,351 yesterday as officers from the various police precincts reported 1,171 new associate memberships.

The Heurich Brewing Co. led the subscriptions for the day with a contribution of $100. The Premier Cab Association and J. R. Turney also were high in the list with subscriptions of $50 each.

Locust Food

Pests Make Excellent Dish, Students Discover.

For the first time in 17 years the choosy housewife who resides in Maryland, or thereabouts, may now adorn her dinner table with big, fat, juicy locusts (cicadas to the scientist).

"Locusts Saute," the dish is called and, according to entomology students at the University of Maryland, it's "fit for a king."

The students claim to know because it composed the "refreshments" part of a locust party, held recently at Avenel, Md. There, at the estate of J. A. Hyslop, Department of Agriculture expert, the students are conducting research projects.

Hyslop himself directed preparation of the dish. He said the young locusts were dug from the ground and hustled off to the frying pan filled with butter.

The dish, said to be not unlike that of soft shell crabs, is recorded as far back as Biblical times. During the eighth plague of Egypt, when the locusts had destroyed all green things, the Children of Israel were said to have eaten the pests.

Business Area Trolley Tracks Job Completed

Installation of the "northeast quadrant" at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, one of the major track changes to be made in the downtown streetcar system under orders of the Public Utilities Commission, was completed by the Capital Transit Co. yesterday.

Such work is not standardized; each piece of metal is made to fit to one other piece of metal and the dimensions of each piece are set forth on an engineer's drawing board and especially fabricated in the steel factory before the workmen who put it in place see it.

Speed with which the job was done was hailed by Capital Transit Co. officers as remarkable. Robert A. Dougan, assistant to the president of the company, said he believed the work had been done in record-breaking time. That was the consensus of other company officers. The men were very proud of their job and one confessed that they had worked a little harder than they might have worked on an ordinary job. Everybody in the city was either riding or walking over them to see what they were doing, he confessed.

Ninety men were employed in the crew which worked day and night to complete the job, which was begun on April 28. Traffic was disarranged on May 4—that is, vehicular traffic was cut off on Pennsylvania avenue for right-hand turns onto Fourteenth street.

Most of the street repair, adjacent to the tracks, had been done before the traffic rush hour yesterday afternoon. Completion of the repairs, which Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst, director of highways, said were paid for by the street car company, were made after the late rush hour.

Installation of the quadrant is designed to permit Fourteenth street cars to run up and down Fourteenth street to the Avenue without making the useless loop into New York avenue, Fifteenth street and the Avenue.

"I am glad to see that many students are following up their school training with summer courses at the Citizens' Military Training Camps," Col. Cootes told the corps "and that some of you are entering Reserve Officers' Training Corps units."

The cadets of the school's graduating class are appointed as officers in the fall of their last year, but receive their commissions at the end of the year if they prove they deserve them.

The school's competitive drill will be held Monday at 10 a. m. at the Ellipse. Those to received commissions yesterday were:

Symphony Heads To Meet Tuesday

The board of directors of the National Symphony Association will meet Tuesday, it was announced yesterday. The board anticipates that a decision on the projected summer concerts by the orchestra will be reached at the meeting.

Association officials said they are waiting a reply from the musicians' union on a proposal for employment of members of the orchestra which was sent the union Wednesday.

The association and the union have disagreed on the employment of outside musicians and on the reinstatement of George Gaul, personnel director of the orchestra. Assurance of the concerts waits solution of their differences.

Negro Steals Truck Loaded With Ginger Ale

Corcoran Art Prize Is Won By Nordgren

Peter De Anna and John Striffer Are Awarded Scholarships.

Ruth G. Nimmer, Joseph Homes and Eleanor Cox Take Firsts.

Students at the Corcoran School of Art were awarded prizes for their work at exercises at the Corcoran Art Gallery yesterday afternoon. Six cash first prizes were given for work done by the students in painting, drawing and sculpture.

For the first time this year the school is awarding two full time scholarships to local high school students. The scholarships went to Peter De Anna and John Striffer, both of Central High School.

The judges of sculpture submitted by the Corcoran students were William Marks Simpson, of Baltimore, and Carl C. Moss, of this city. Both are well-known sculptors.

Composing the jury of awards for classes in drawing and painting were Richard Lahey, Eugen Weisz, Mrs. Mathilde M. Leisenring and Kenneth Stubbs, all members of the Corcoran Art School faculty; John C. Johansen, of New York City, and Mrs. Katherine Langhorne Adams, of this city.

Life class—First prize of $125, Alfred Goldschmidt; honorable mention, Barbara Peterson, Marguerite Riley, Allen Kroon, Robert Miller.

Sketch class—Honorable mention, Marguerite Burgess.

Landscape class—Honorable mention, Nina C. Luke.

56 Seek Permits To Marry in Busy Day at D.C. Court

Dan Cupid, that chubby little fellow who goes about the land shooting unsuspecting persons with his famed bow and arrow, did a rushing business in the District Supreme Court yesterday when 56 marriage licenses were issued by a group of harassed clerks.

The number falls short of the all-time record of 74, established at Easter several years ago, but is far above 40 issued last year just before Memorial Day.

Many of those who obtained licenses yesterday were from out town, and as one of them explained, "It's a swell time to get hitched up and see the sights also."

10 Forced to Flee In Blaze at Shop

Fire of undetermined origin yesterday afternoon swept through the J. Holober upholstery shop at 611 F street northwest, routed ten employes and caused damage which Mrs. Joseph Holober, in charge of the shop at the time, estimated at "thousands of dollars."

A crowd gathered to watch firemen, responding to two alarms, fight the blaze. Damage was confined to the ground floor. Occupants of law offices on the upper floors were driven to the street by smoke.

The fire started in the middle of the shop, where the employes were at work. Efforts to fight with hand extinguishers proved futile. Mrs. Holober said that she could not estimate the exact amount of damage, but that valuable furniture had been destroyed. The shop, she said, was operated by the Hecht Co.

Flower Woman Was Arrested

Sales on Holiday Eve Spoiled As Flower Vendor Is Arrested

Police Take Mrs. Kazlaskia, 3-Year-Old Michael and Blossoms to Station, but Friend Posts Collateral to Avert Women's Bureau Stay.

For weeks Mrs. Fannie Kazlaskia had looked forward to yesterday as her big day. She realized that persons who won't spend money for flowers at any other time will buy a bunch of peonies or a bouquet of roses on the eve of Memorial Day.

Mrs. Kazlaskia sells flowers in front of the Veterans' Administration Building, Vermont avenue and I street. With her earnings—seldom more than $3 a day—she tries to support an unemployed husband and four small children.

Yesterday afternoon, with her flower basket so full that she had hopes of making $4, she took up her usual stand. Her youngest son, 3-year-old Michael, played on the sidewalk while she waited patiently for customers.

Before homegoing clerks from the Veterans' Bureau had made scarcely a dent in the basket of flowers, a police patrol wagon from the Third Precinct carried off Mrs. Kaslaskia, Michael, and the peonies and roses.

Michael knew at once that something unpleasant was happening. He kicked and screamed. A crowd gathered and muttered things about policemen in general and arresting Officers H. C. Johnson and W. S. Rinker in particular. Mrs. Kazlaskia explained again and again that she had a vendor's permit.

"See! See! For this thing I paid $8," she cried as she waved a paper which gives her the right to sell in unrestricted areas.

The policemen told her someone nad complained—they had to take her to the precinct station. The flowers were taken into the station house along with Mrs. Kazlaskia and Michael.

There the flower vendor was told she must post $10 collateral—$5 for vending in a congested area and $5 for stopping longer than to make a sale—or spend the night in a cell at the Women's Bureau.

It was 4:40 p. m. when she was booked. If collateral has not been posted within a half hour women are usually transferred to the Women's Bureau. At 5:30 Mrs. Kazlaskia and Michael were still at the Third Precinct.

Didn't Have Enough.

"I got no money," the woman whispered. "When I saw the policemen coming I shoved my change into Abie's pocket." Abie sells papers in front of the Veterans' Administration. But even if she had hung on to her change it would have fallen far short of $10, Mrs. Kazlaskia admitted.

Meanwhile a clerk from the Veterans' Bureau had rushed into the station house to try to rescue the flower vendor. She was Mrs. E. B. Pittman, of 1424 K street northwest. It was Mrs. Pittman who had given Mrs. Kazlaskia money for her vendor's license a few months ago. But yesterday she had only $1 with her.

The best she could offer was to take Michael home to his father at 1300 Eleventh street northwest. But Michael wanted to stay with his mother.

The precinct captain was getting impatient. He called the Women's Bureau to tell them to expect Mrs. Kazlaskia. And then in rushed Mrs. Lena Schrott, Abie's mother, with the $10 for collateral.

After she was ordered to appear in Police Court Monday at 9 a. m. Mrs. Kazlaskia gathered up Michael and the fast-wilting flowers and started for home.

"I never been arrested before," she explained. "I didn't want to sleep in a cell. And who would look after the flowers? Now I will take them home and my husband will help me fix them so they do not spoil. My husband, he used to be a florist. Now there is no work. Sometimes he sell flowers, too."

The Kazlaskias' three older children—Dorothy, 10, Johnny, 8, and Georgie, 6—live in Boston with their grandparents.

"We can't afford to keep them with us," said their mother. "Sometimes we send them money. I hope they don't hear about this. It shames me, to be arrested, Mike, he is too little to understand."

But even Michael seemed happy to come out of the station house into the late afternoon sunshine.

Col. Wetherill Named R.O.T.C. Instructor Here

Col. Richard Wetherill, 59, former commanding officer of the Thirty-fifth Infantry in the Philippines, has been appointed new senior instructor of the reserve officer units in Washington, it was learned yesterday.

It will be his second tour of duty in this city. In 1923 he was a student at the Army War College and, upon graduation, was appointed to the military intelligence division of the War Department General Staff. He held this post until 1927.

Roberts Asks U. S. Regulate Parking Lots

Cites List of Complaints Lodged by Autoists Using Spaces.

Urges That Owners Be Required to Take Out Licenses.

The District Commissioners should take over regulation of automobile parking lots, William A. Roberts, people's counsel, said in a memorandum filed with the Commissioners yesterday.

Roberts set forth a long list of camplaints which had been lodged with him by users of parking lots and said the Commissioners should act to protect users.

Ample authority for regulation of such lots, he contended, could be found by the Commissioners in the general license law enacted by Congress in 1932.

Complaints presented to him for redress, Roberts said, had ranged from insulting language by parking lot employes, who used patrons' cars, to inability to get redress for valuable articles stolen from parked cars.

Not only should parking lot owners be required to take out licenses and pass police inspection prior to licensing, but they also should be required to post adequate bond that would safeguard the property intrusted to their care, Roberts said.

Roberts' memorandum was submitted to the Commissioners in view of the complaint that legislation specifically referring to parking lots might not be enacted by Congress this session. Adequate authority to meet the most pressing needs of regulation already is in the hands of the Commissioners in the provisions of the licensing act, he said.

American U. Dinner To Be Held Tonight

Dr. Leon C. Marshall, formerly of the NRA, who has been appointed professor of political economy at American University, will speak at the annual American University dinner, to be held tonight at 2400 Sixteenth street. He will speak on "Objectives of a National Economic Policy."

Dr. Arthur C. Christie, president of the board of trustees of the university, will preside. Dr. Joseph M. Gray, chancellor, will make announcements concerning plans for next year.

The past academic year will be reviewed by Dr. George B. Woods, dean of the college of liberal arts; Dr. Ernest S. Griffith, dean of the graduate school, and Arthur S. Flemming, director of the school of public affairs. The alumni will be represented on the program by B. Brook Bright, of the alumni association.

At the college last night the commencement entertainment, the senior class day exercises and the student council dance were held at the gymnasium auditorium. The class will was read by Esther Smith and Frank Hoadley, the class prophecy by Betty Wheeler, and an original skit by Edward Hopper was presented. There were musical selections by the chorus, the Girls' Glee Club, the Men's Glee Club, the orchestra, and the string quartet, followed by the dance.

Trinity College Alumnae Here Today for Reunion

Trinity College today will welcome large numbers of its alumnae coming from all parts of the country for a week-end reunion.

The day's program will begin with a 7:30 a. m. mass at the college, Michigan avenue and Harewood road northeast. Later in the morning there will be business meetings of alumni officers and the alumnae council.

A presentation of the play, "Berkley Square," will be given by the college dramatic society at 4 p. m., and an annual banquet will be at 7 p. m.

The Rev. William H. Russell, of Catholic University, will officiate at a baccalaureate mass for Trinity seniors tomorrow at 10:30 a. m.

Helen Dettweiler's 74 in Star Play Breaks D. C. Women's Mark

Girl Cuts 11 Strokes Off Record

Score Is Only Two Over Men's Par on Beaver Dam Course.

Mrs. Walper's 92 Is 2d in Tourney for Low Gross Prize.

Helen Dettweiler, 21-year-old Congressional Country Club golf star, set an all-time District feminine competitive course record yesterday when she shot a sensational 74, two over men's par, at Beaver Dam Country Club to wallop Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, in a play-off for first low gross prize in the Star Cup tournament.

Playing golf that would have done honor to any professional, Miss Dettweiler went out in 35, one under par, and came home in 39.

Mrs. Walper's best was 46—46—92.

The previous course mark at Beaver Dam was an 85, held jointly by Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, and Miss Ellen Kincaid, formerly of Beaver Dam, now of Congressional.

Miss Dettweiler racked up birdies on the sixth nad seventh holes of the outgoing side. Three putt greens cost her pars on the first and eleventh holes.

On the twelfth, after being 2 feet away, she missed her putt, and on the sixteenth, a par five, she knocked her iron third into a trap, forcing her to take a seven.

Her card with par follows:

Out—par	4	4	4	5	3	4	4	4	4	—36

In—par .	5	4	4	4	3	4	5	3	4	—36—72

Klein Stars as Phils Beat Dodgers, 10-2

Philadelphia, May 29 (AP).—Chuck Klein picked up at Baker Bowl today where he left off three years ago when he was traded, and drove in five runs as the Phillies trampled the Brooklyn Dodgers, 10 to 2.

He found the range of the right-field wall in the first inning to hit his first home run since his return from the Chicago Cubs, and added a double and a single before the game ended, sending Brooklyn back to the National League cellar.

SmithShutsOut Phils; Giants Win, 15-0

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—Lefty Al Smith, the Giant's second-best pitcher, retired 23 men in order through seven and two-thirds innings today, and then allowed a pair or singles to ruin his no-hit game as the New Yorkers battered the Boston Bees, 15 to 0.

A Texas leaguer by Hal Lee with two out in the eighth, and a hot grounder through the infield by Bill Lewis in the ninth were the only Bee hits off Smith as he chalked up his fifth win.

Up to the time Lee connected in the eighth, not a man had reached first. Smith did not walk a batter. He had one strikeout.

The series marked the first the Giants have lost at the Polo Grounds this season. They left their home grounds after today's game with a record of 13 wins in 17 games for the Polo Grounds stay.

The Giants scored all their runs in three innings. Twenty-one men went to bat in the first two frames to pile up 11 runs, and four hits in the fifth, including Gus Mancuso's home run, brought four more tallies.

Owen's Hit Wins For Tigers in 10th, 4 to 3

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 29.—Clarence (Red) Phillips, big rookie right hander from Oklahoma, making his first start of the season for the Tigers, pitched Detroit back into third place in the American League today with a 4-to-3 ten-inning victory over the Chicago White Sox. It was the only game scheduled in the American League.

Marvin Owen batted in the winning run with the bases filled and two out, smashing a hard drive that hit Pitcher Babe Phelps in the stomach and bounced away for a single, sending Al Simmons across the plate.

Phillips, up from Beaumont, in the Texas League, held the hard-hitting Sox to eight hits, four of which came in the second inning for all the Chicago runs, and walked only one batter. Bonura's single, Hayes' double, and singles by Piet and Morrissey accounted for the Sox's 3 runs.

Goose Goslin's second home run in two days and his seventh of the season tied the score for Detroit in the fifth.

Australians Get Edge in Pairing

Draw May Mean a Great Deal Before Matches Are Finished.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 29.—A wafer-like edge, that may develop into a decided advantage, fell to Australia today as battle lines were drawn for the American zone Davis Cup tennis series between Australia and the United States.

The luck of the draw in the five-match series which will earn the triumphant team a berth in the interzone final at Wimbledon in July against the winner of the European zone will send the Anzac champion, Adrian Quist, against the American titleholder, Wilmer Allison, in the opening encounter on the Germantown Cricket Club's center court tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Red-haired Donald Budge, of Oakland, Calif., will oppose the veteran Australian team captain, Jack Crawford, in the other singles contest. In accordance with international cup regulations, the players will swap opponents for the concluding singles on Monday, with Allison meeeting Crawford and Budge taking the court against Quist.

Although neither team was required to do so until tomorrow afternoon, nonplaying Capt. Walter Pate, of the American team, agreed to Crawford's suggestion and the pairings for the doubles match scheduled for Sunday were drawn by Mayor S. Davis Wilson. Budge and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, were pitted against Crawford and Quist.

Before the announcement of the draw the series was regarded as a 50-50 proposition, but the Allison-Quist development made Australia generally a 5-to-4, and in some quarters 5-to-3, favorite.

On form shown to date the 31-year-old Allison is the weaker of Uncle Sam's singles players, while Quist, on the other hand, seems to be holding the peak which carried him through a series of sensational triumphs over Crawford at home.

Both are the dynamic, gambling type of player, confident and in fine health; Quist appears ready and fully qeuipped for a major joust Allison is a slow starter and seldom arrives at top form until midsummer. But he's a tireless fighter and his teammates are counting on him to raise his game under the spur of competition.

Budge's youth and superior stamina are figured to carry him to victory over Crawford. The stocky Australian captain has been impressive in practice, handling shots skillfully from both wings, but he appears to be short of endurance.

A master tactician, Crawford's big hope depends on whether he can confuse his young rival. Although he still allows a margin of only inches on his powerful flat forehand drives, Budge has settled down a great deal since last year and rarely breaks out in a rash of wildness.

Pate's selection of Allison over "Bitsy" Grant, of Atlanta, for the singles came as no surprise after Grant's reversal of form the last few days, particularly when he was smeared by Budge in practice. Likewise there was no eyebrow lifting when Crawford failed to name Vivian McGrath for the competition.

Lopez, Coast Champion, To Wrestle Koverly Here

Vincent Lopez, winner of the recent Pacific Coast wrestling tournament, will make his first appearance in Washington next Thursday night when he encounters Wild George Koverly in the feature match of the weekly mat show at Griffith Stadium.

Recognized as world heavyweight champion in California and several other States, Lopez is 27 years old, stands 6 feet 2 inches, and weighs 226 pounds.

Buell Named Treasury Net Head for 22d Time

Willard E. Buell entered his twenty-second year as president of the Treasury Department Tennis Association yesterday at the annual meeting for the election of officers. Buell has been elected president every year since the establishment of the Departmental Tennis League in 1915. He retires next year.

The vice presidency went to Eugene Nolan, while M. P. Coe was voted secretary-treasurer; George Clark, captain, and Larry Phillips assistant captain. Treasury opens its season next Monday with a match against Veterans' Administration.

Frays Today Seen Vital To Nats

Whitehill, Newsom Are Slated to Pitch the Two Games.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

New York, May 29.—In a position to establish themselves in the thick of the pennant race and do the rest of the league a distinct service simultaneously, the Nats arrived here tonight to await the morrow and a double engagement with the Yankees.

With the Nats will be riding the hopes of every club that still harbors pennant ambitions, with the exception of the Yankees. Anything the Washington club can contribute toward checking the Yankees' threat to make a runaway of the flag race will be duly and deeply appreciated by the Red Sox, Tigers, Indians, et al.

But the Nats are here for purely a selfish purpo . Six victories in their last eight games have stirred anew the team's hopes to figure seriously in the flag fight and a double victory over the Yankees in the Decoration Day bill would narrow to four games the present margin between the Nats status and the lead.

Newsom to Pitch.

An inkling as to the seriousness of purpose with which Manager Bucky Harris is sending his club into the two games here is seen in his announcement that Buck Newsom will pitch against the Yankees in one of the games.

Newsom thus goes back to the mound with but one day's rest. He went eight innings against the Athletics at Griffith Stadium on Thursday and normally would not be due to pitch until Monday or Tuesday, but Harris is intent on presenting his strongest front for the games here.

Babbling Buck volunteered for the job against the Yankees despite his lack of rest. The big fellow is convinced of his ability to beat the New York club and Harris readily acquiesced to his request for the job. In Newsom's only meeting with the Yanks this season he shut them out, 1-0, in the memorable opening game in Washington.

Whitehill Hurls Today.

Earl Whitehill will pitch the first game for the Nats tomorrow. The veteran southpaw, an impressive sinner in his last two starts, is now deemed at the peak of his form and he has always been a consistent sinner against the Yankees. On one occasion, two years ago, he held 'em hitless for 8 1-3 innings before pitching a one-hit game.

Manager Joe McCarthy is expected to counter with Lefty Gomez in one of the games in an effort to pitch to the Nats' supposed weakness against southpaws.

Gomez in his last start against Washington was the victim of Newsom's 1-0 performance in the inaugural game. He has not pitched since last Monday. Johnny Murphy is expected to start the second game for the Yanks.

Tommorrow's battles will mark the first meeting between the Nats and Joe DiMaggio, the Nats' rookie sensation, and it will afford for the first time this season a direct comparison between DiMaggio and Buddy Lewis, Washington's prize rookie of the season.

Lewis Tops DiMaggio.

Critics throughout the league have devoted volumes to the debate as to whether Lewis or DiMaggio is the superior player. At this writing, Lewis leads the Yankee recruit by a few points in the batting averages, but DiMaggio has produced the longer hits.

Cecil Travis is now a fixture in the outfitld for the Nats whenever the Washington club faces right-handed pitching, Manager Harris declared today. Travis' clever play against the A's yesterday won him Harris' praise. He will play left or rightfield, defending on the proximity of the fences. Harris aims to start Travis in all the short fields in deference to his lack of experience.

Pilot 'Will Never Send Carnera in Ring Again'

New York, May 29 (AP).—Primo Carnera is definitely through fighting, at least as far as his manager, Louis Soresi, is concerned.

Soresi declared today that if Primo recovers from the paralysis of the left leg still keeping him in bed and suffered in a fight with Leroy Haynes Wednesday night, and still insisted on fighting, he would have to find a new manager.

Thomson, Ferrier Meet Today For British Amateur Golf Title

By the Associated Press.

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 29.—Hector Thomson, the Scottish champion from Machrihanish, and James Ferrier, Australian titleholder, today reached the finals of the British Amateur golf championship and will play 36 holes over the royal and ancient course tomorrow for the crown relinquished by Lawson Little.

Thomson advanced today by beating Gordon Peters, 2 and 1, in the quarter-finals, and Cecil Ewing, the Irish star, 4 and 3. Ferrier, conqueror of Robert Sweeny, the last American to go out, beat Morton Dykes, 3 and 2, in the morning and G. Alec Hill, who had beaten Cyril Tolley in the morning at the nineteenth, in the afternoon, 1 up.

The conclusion of today's semi-final matches gave some indication of what Ferrier will have to face tomorrow from a crowd overwhelmingly partisan to the Scotch boy. When Ferrier finished his match on the home green this afternoon, scarcely a whisper of applause greeted his victory, while great cheers went up as Thomson moved into the finals.

Disregarding this fact, Thomson, on his record in the championship, is a superior golfer and is favored to win. His first relapse of the entire week came at the start of today's quarter-final round, when he took 6s on the first two holes, but he immediately settled down and played steady golf to win.

Again in the afternoon, in the face of a slanting, pelting rain, he calmly fired a 36 on the first nine at Ewing and marched to an easy victory.

Rippy, Hallock Meet Today For Title

Both Surprise to Reach Kenwood Invitation Tourney Final.

By Dave Herman.

Claude Rippy, District municipal golf champion, and Bernie Hallock, host club star, who weren't listed among the favorites, played like a couple of champs yesterday, to reach the finals of the Kenwood Golf and Country Club invitation tournament.

This morning at 10 o'clock Rippy and Hallock will meet and have it out over the 36-hole route.

Definitely on his game, Rippy pulled the unexpected in his morning quarterfinal match with the Kenwood stroker, Levi Yoder, winning 3 and 2, and unleashing such high-class golf that when the battle ended on that "Punch Bowl" sixteenth, the public links lad needed par in for a 68.

Rippy didn't lose any of the magic with wood and iron in the afternoon. He removed John Bergelin, of Kenwood, former University of Michigan golf captain, by the same count, going out in 34 to stand two up, and playing the next seven holes in one over par after tiring perceptibly along the stretch.

Thus for the day Rippy played 32 holes in 1 under par, which is some kind of golf for that tricky Kenwood course.

Hallock, a tall, 25-year-old Government worker with curly black hair and a John Boles mustache, eliminated Russ Hollebaugh, a club companion, 2 and 1, in a ding-dong morning match.

In sharp contrast to his fair-to-middlin' 74 of the morning, Hallock set a firecracker under Old Man Par in his match with 19-year-old Boby Leapley, the public links lad, who had been knocking off favorites right and left. Hallock trimmed Leapley, 6 and 5, with a two-under-par performance, rounding the turn in 33 and shooting 3-4-5-4, 1 under par.

There were two exciting morning matches. Bergelin had to sink a 20-footer for a birdie 3 on the twentieth hole to defeat Tommy Webb, husky Washington Golf and Country Club player, while Leapley was carried to the eighteenth before winning from Harvey Johnson, of Columbia, 1 up.

Results:

First Flight.

J. Bergelin (Kenwood) defeated Tommy Webb, jr. (Washington), 1 up, 20 holes. Claude Rippy (unattached) defeated Levi Yoder (Kenwood), 4 and 3; Bernie Hallock (Kenwood) defeated Russ Hollebaugh (Kenwood), 2 and 1; Bob Leapley (unattached) defeated Harvey Johnson (Columbia), 1 up.

Second round—Hallock defeated Leapley, 6 and 5; Rippy defeated Bergelin, 3 and 2.

Consolations—B. C. Brown (Congressional) won by default; Astor Clarke (Washington) defeated S. S. Harvey (Argyle), 2 and 1; Luther Steward, jr. (Columbia) defeated Bob Brownell (Manor), 5 and 4; Lou Harris (Woodmont) and Barney Welsh (unattached) defaulted.

Second Flight.

Dale Atherton (unattached) defeated H. S. Helsing (Kenwood), 4 and 3; J. Olmsted (Argyle) defeated J. J. Cullimane (Washington), 2 and 1.

Finals—Olmsted defeated Atherton, 6 and 5.

Third Flight.

Toby Tyler (unattached) defeated J. Nichols (Kenwood), 4 and 3; F. Chaimson (unattached) defeated C. B. Kimball (Kenwood), 5 and 4.

Finals—Tyler defeated Chaimson, 3 and 2.

Peoples Druggists Play.

Only 150 Watch I. C. 4-A Track Title Trials

By the United Press.

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, May 29.—California's generosity in giving the I. C. A. A. A. track and field championships back to the East proved a boomerang at the gate today when a mere handful of spectators witnessed the qualifying trials. The crowd, conservatively estimated at 150, was one of the smallest ever to see a big-time track meet any place in the country.

When the three California colleges—Stanford, Southern California and U. of California—which had dominated the meet 14 of the last 15 years, chose not to compete, there was great rejoicing among the Eastern colleges.

Without a Far Western entry, the meet plunged into mediocrity. Performances were dull.

The only bright performance in a day of routine qualifying in 11 of the 15 events was contributed by Milton Green, Harvard's captain, who put on a courageous exhibition to lift the hopes of Crimson for a victory in the team battle tomorrow. Green virtually won the broad jump with a leap of 24 feet 9⅛ inches, and won his two trial heats in the 110-meter hurdles in 15.3 and 15 seconds. He performed with one leg swathed in bandages and tape from the ankle to the knee.

Dutra Captures $3,500 Detroit Links Tourney

Detroit, May 29.—May 29 (AP).—Finishing with his second 69 of the day, Olin Dutra, Los Angeles professional, today won the $3,500 True Temper Open golf championship here with a score of 279, five strokes better than his closest competitor, Harry Cooper, Chicago.

Dutra's 72-hole total was nine strokes better than par.

Negro Olympic Controversy Settled

Barred by local officials from the District A. A. U. games scheduled this afternoon at College Park, which have been designated as regional Olympic trials, a quartet of Negro athletes, three of them from Howard University, yesterday were informed by William J. Bingham, of Harvard, they would be automatically qualified for the semi-final trials at Cambridge, Mass., next month.

Bingham, chairman of the Olympic track and field committee, made the announcement following the receipt of a telegram from Frank Coleman, chairman of the board of athletic control at Howard who had protested what he termed discrimination on the part of District officials.

Have Own Branch.

Entries of the boys had been rejected by Dorsey Griffith, regional chairman in charge of today's games, who wrote to Coleman explaining that they were ineligible to compete. Griffith last night pointed out that colored athletes have their own branch of the Amateur Union and because of this are obliged to qualify in their own games. He added that the recent meet held at Howard could have been designated as a regional trial had permission been requested. The four boys are not registered in Griffith's territory and this resulted in his refusal to accept their applications.

Odell Pryor and Edgar Lee are undergradutes at Howard. Pryor runs the 100-yard dash in 9.8 and the 220-yard sprint in 22 seconds. Lee is a distance runner, while Maurice Blakemore, former Howard student, broad jumps better than 23 feet consistently. Rozia Singleterre, a student of St. Augustine College, Raleigh, N. C., also is a sprinter.

Curt Davis Beats Reds, 8-1, in Debut With Cubs

Chicago, May 29 (AP). — Curt Davis, making his Chicago debut with the Cubs, defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 8 to 1, today, to give Chicago a 3-1 edge in the series. A four-run splurge in the fourth sewed up the game for the Cubs.

Tech Wins Track Title; Central Star Equals 34-Year Record

Thompson Is Only Double Winner

Stringy Ace Runs 220 in 22.4 to Tie Mark Set Back in 1902.

Team Point Totals.

Tech	34
Eastern	63
Central	39
Western	11
Roosevelt	7

By John R. Vosburgh.

Tech High and stringy Bill Thompson, of Central, celebrated the thirty-ninth annual interhigh track and field championships in Central Stadium yesterday but it is doubtful which was the outstanding celebrant. Tech won its fourth successive championship, but this 6-foot 5-inch Thompson guy more or less dimmed the luster of the entire Tech team.

While the Maroon was rolling up 34 points to Eastern's 63 and Central's 39, wee Willie was winning the only double victory of the day, one to tie a 34-year-old record, besides a downright sensational anchor leg on the mile relay to race Central into second place in the traditional fixtures after four years of track sterility.

The peak of the comeback came in the 220 when Thompson equaled the interhigh record of 22.4 seconds set June 6, 1902, by Dick Dear, also of Central. Pounding around the curved course with his giant stride, the basketball star had distanced the entire field by 6 yards by the time he had reached the stretch. In the 100 his long stride carried him to the tape one step ahead of Frank Thomas of Tech, despite the fact that his customary slow start had him fourth in a field of five at the 30-yard mark, and not an inch ahead of the rest of the field with 5 yards to go.

The colorful relay saw Central's No. 1 man, Salvatore Servator, take a small lead in the first lap with Eastern,and Tech 2 yards behind as the second lap started. Central all but passed out of the race in this second lap, as Bill Chappalear, of Eastern, and John Casper, of Tech, outdistanced George Minton, with Roosevelt far in the rear.

Eastern led Tech by a yard going into the third lap, with Minton handing the baton to Paul Thaxton about 20 yards back. Lou Niefeld maintained Eastern's lead most of the lap, but Tech's No. 3 man, Gus Militzer, had a 1-yard lead as the fourth lap began. Thaxton handed the Central stick to Thompson, 40 yards behind. Then the big boy began burning up the cinders. By the time he had hit the back stretch he had cut the lead to 25 yards. His huge stride bore down on Eastern's flying Al Miller and Tech's bespectacled Leo Wall like seven-league boots.

Mile run—Won by Williamson (Tech); second, Lancaster (Roosevelt); third, Englehardt (Eastern); fourth, Luckett (Tech); fifth, Skipton (Central). Time 4:44.

Shot put—Won by Cohen (Eastern); second, Fleischman (Tech); third, Swank (Central); fourth, Rawlins (Tech); fifth, Montgomery (Eastern). Distance, 46 ft. 7½ in.

100-yard dash—Won by Thompson (Central); second, Thomas (Tech); third, Bucca (Eastern); fourth, Haske (Tech); fifth, Michaels (Eastern). Time, 10.2 secs.

120-yard high hurdles—Won by March (Tech); second, Wall (Tech); third, Rouff (Eastern); fourth, Toisman (Tech); fifth, Haskell (Eastern). Time, 16.8 secs.

440-yard dash—Won by Miller (Eastern); second, Servator (Central); third, Ford (Tech); fourth, Niefeld (Eastern); fifth, Stone (Western). Time, 53 secs.

Pole vault—Tie for first place between Holbrook, Wells and Belote, of Tech; fourth, Walker (Eastern); fifth, tie between McCall (Eastern) and Flemins (Central). Height, 10 ft.

High jump—Won by Minton (Western); second, March (Tech); third, tie between Wall (Tech), Russell (Eastern) and Du-Teal (Central). Height, 5 ft. 7⅝ in.

Half mile—Won by Chappelear (Eastern); second, Miller (Eastern); third, Casper (Tech); fourth, Militzer (Tech); fifth, Streitberger (Eastern). Time, 2:08.6.

220-yard low hurdles—Won by Wall (Tech); second, Michaels (Eastern); third, Kanelopolus (Central); fourth, Lockwood (Tech); fifth, Toisman (Tech). Time, 26.6 secs.

220-yard dash—Won by Thompson (Central); second, Bucca (Eastern); third, Thomas (Tech); fourth, Minton (Central); fifth, Haske (Tech). Time, 22.4 secs. (Ties record set June 6, 1902, by Dick Dear, of Central.)

Mile relay—Won by Eastern (Streitberger, Chappelear, Niefeld, Miller); second, Central; third, Tech; fourth, Roosevelt. Time, 3:36.8.

Javeline throw—Won by Evans (Eastern); second, Sachs (Tech); third, Valentine (Eastern); fourth, Cohen (Eastern); fifth, Hatch (Western). Distance, 146 ft. 11 in.

Broad jump—Won by Baulsis (Tech); second, tie between March (Tech) and Ferguson (Central); fourth, Schwartz (Eastern); fifth, tie between Cookser (Tech) and Haske (Tech). Distance, 20 ft. ½ in.

G-Men Rally to Win Over Police, 8 to 5

Bureau of Investigation was forced to come through with seven runs in the last three innings yesterday to beat Metropolitan Police, 8 to 5, for its seventh victory in seven starts in the United States Government League. Home runs by Morris and Pitcher Jim Tennant helped the G-Man cause.

Tennant and Morris hit homers in the seventh to put the G-Men back in the ball game, but singles by Husky and Heiser got one run back for the Police in the same frame only to have Investigation rally in the next inning.

A. A. U. Track Stars Vie at Maryland

D. C. Championships to Draw 10 Colleges to Scene Today.

From ten colleges and eight States a crack field of athletes will swarm to the University of Maryland today to take part in the annual District track and field championships which are to be run off in the form of an Olympic tryout.

Seldom, if ever, has a field as impressive as that gathered for today's classic assembled on a track in the Washington area. The District A. A. U. will send a number of the outstanding competitors to the final Olympic tryouts.

Among the foremost events on the card will be the 1,500 meter run in which Coleman Headley, Maryland's Southern Conference mile champion, should be pressed to the utmost to uphold his recently established prestige. His opposition will come from Lieut. Dick Bauer, of Fort Myer, former Army miler at West Point; Ivan Mothershead, of Virginia Polytechnic Institute; Fred Hardy, of Richmond; Plat Bullar, William and Mary, and Joe Burnett, of Gallaudet.

Obviously preparing to launch an attempt to make the Olympic team as a decathlon man, Arnold Prehelm, former national pentathlon champion, now an employe in the Department of Agriculture, has entered seven events. He will compete in every field event and in the 400-meter hurdles.

Bill Guckeyson, of Maryland, great weight man, faces two former Penn relay winners in Monk Little, of William and Mary and Ralston Legore, of North Carolina, in the javelin throw and other adversaries such as Bill Clark, of Richmond, and Ed Hahnfeldt, of Bullis Prep.

The 100-yard dash has attracted a stellar list of sprinters. Among those who have already broken 10 seconds are Rozia Singletary, of St. Augustine College, Raleigh, N. C.; Bill Watkins, University of Virginia; Cliff Lomax, Quantico Marine, and Gibbons Young, of Washington College.

Their opposition consists of Joe Ryan, Maryland; George Bogan, Georgetown; Dixie Walker, C. U., and Al Graziano, Johns Hopkins mercury man. The high jump and pole vault loom patricularly inviting with Frank Cronin, of Maryland, and Corrado Goffredi, of C. U., the chief competitors in the latter.

105 Marathoners Seek Olympic Berth Today

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Honed to an edge that would shame the keenest razors and keyed to a new pitch of enthusiasm by visions of the Olympic team berth for the winner, a battalion of 105 steel-muscled marathon runners will hie themselves over the blistering hills and dales of the Mount Vernon highway this afternoon in the fifth annual renewal of the national marathon championship, sponsored by the Evening Star.

The starting gun will send the pack on its way promptly at 2 o'clock from Mount Vernon over the boulevard to the Arlington Memorial Bridge. Across the bridge to Potomac Park. Around Hains Point to Fourteenth street, right to Constitution avenue, and right to Pennsylvania avenue. Around the Capitol to East Capitol street. East to Seventh street. South to B street and west to Pennsylvania avenue. Thence to E street, into Potomac Park, and once around the oval to the finish line at the Zero Milestone.

One of the largest fields ever entered in the local grind, and without question the greatest, the entry list is studded with favorites, hasbeens and would-be's and a score or more of dark horses.

The second of the U. S. 3-man marathon team will be selected and the third probably will be chosen on a basis of comparative times made in the two trials.

A running broadcast of the entire race, the latter part of which will be aired in Germany, together with an address by Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador to this country, will be one of the afternoon's features. Dr. Luther also will present the winning trophy.

A wide-open race is predicted, and wide open in this instance does not mean the field will be strung along the highway like mileposts. Pat Dengis, defending titleholder, already has made arrangements to go to Europe, so confident is he of winning. Les Pawson, Johnny Kelley, Bill McMahon, Bill Steiner and a host of others rate close to the top in pre-race figuring.

Elaborate preparations have been made for the comfort of the runners. First-aid stations have been established along the route of the run and police escorts provided. Playground supervisors will guide the runners.

A public address system erected at the finish line will keep the throng assembled at this point advised of the progress of the athletes. Music between announcements will be supplied by the Elks Boys Band.

Franklin School Wins Over Woodward, 12-10

Maintaining a whirlwind pace throughout the game, the Franklin Day School, of Baltimore, beat out Woodward, 12 to 10, yesterday on the South Ellipse. Individual honors went to Pitcher Clemensen, of the winners, who struck out seven batsmen, yielded only one walk, hit a double and a triple, and scored two runs.

7 Md. Stickmen In All-America Selections

New Brunswick, N. J., May 29.—Seven University of Maryland players were included on the list of nominations for the 1936 All-American Lacrosse team announced today by the committee of the Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association. Final selections will be made next week and those chosen will be assembled here for practice before the start of the international Lally Cup series with a Canadian team.

The All-American team will play Rutgers here June 13 as a feature of the commencement program. It will proceed to Baltimore June 17 and 19 for matches with Mount Washington and the Baltimore Athletic Club. During its stay there it will practice box lacrosse, which will be played against the Canadians at Vancouver.

Other nominations are:

Goalies—Britten (Princeton), Hallock (Rutgers), Redshaw (Tufts), Pickes (Army). Defense—Marks (Johns Hopkins), Melz (Navy), Jontos (Syracuse), Seliman (St. John's), Witherspoon (Harvard), Swindell (Johns Hopkins), True (Army), Van Mater (Rutgers), Robinson (Princeton), Soucek (Navy), Hamman (St. John's). This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

New York, May 29.

Mr. Westbrook Pegler's habit of letting the quips fall where they may as he taps out those potent pieces of satire for the public prints has, in his time, collected for him a lengthy and notable list of aggrieved. In fact, you will meet people who will come right out and say that they do not like Mr. Pegler at all, which probably makes it mutual, inasmuch as Mr. Pegler has very distinct dislikes of his own.

POVICH.

Since graduating from sports writing to the sacred precincts of the editorial pages, Mr. Pegler has enlarged the scope of his hate-stirring operations. Among his haters now are Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, which elevates Mr. Pegler to something of an international figure of hate, where before his fame as a horrid person was strictly domestic. In America, Mr. Pegler's chief haters are probably Gene Tunney, Jack Sharkey and Clark Griffith, although this is an unofficial ranking and is open to dispute, inasmuch as Mr. Pegler has incurred the dislike of a whole lot of people in his time. But this department feels safe in saying that this trio is at least among his best haters.

As you may have noticed, Mr. Pegler is something of a Robin Hood among hate agitators. That is, he does not molest the smaller fry and is even inclined to tolerate 'em with great enthusiasm. But let a big shot fall afoul of Mr. Pegler's nasty typing finger and his subject is crisply fried in cold type.

He is the man who rose to remark to his reading public that Tunney was racketeered into the title fight with Dempsey by Philadelphia hoodlums, and greeted Tunney's lecture to a Yale Shakespearian class with the observation that Gentleman Gene had finally discovered Shakespeare. He never permitted his public to forget that Jack Sharkey, the cry-baby, was the only fighter who made a financial success out of failure, and when he had occasion to mention Clark Griffith it was as a meddlesome old gent, fawned upon by the local press and altogether taking himself too seriously.

But mostly there was nothing personal in the animus that flowed in Mr. Pegler's pen. His subjects were simply the medium for a column that night and if they were inclined to feel offended, why, as far as Mr. Pegler was concerned, they were still the medium for a good column.

There was, though, I understand, considerable delight upon the part of Mr. Pegler whenever he could manage to pen a piece that was offensive to the sensitive nostrils of Mr. Tunney. As far as I know, Mr. Tunney is the only person at whom Mr. Pegler delighted in taking deliberate aim. The others were chiefly means to an end.

The background of the Pegler-Tunney hate was related to this department the other evening by Mr. Ray Alvis, whose current mission in life is the management of walkathons, the goofy kind of show that is presently operating in Washington. Mr. Alvis, it seems, was on the ground when the Pegler-Tunney hate was spawned.

That was back in 1927 at Tunney's training camp for the second Dempsey fight in Chicago. At the time Alvis was the manager of Mr. Chuck Wiggins, the free-swinging, free-drinking light-heavyweight who was in Tunney's camp as a sparring partner. Mr. Wiggins' tastes ran particularly to ale and he had a habit of slaking his thirst each evening at a nearby tavern, where the press was prone to convene for a bit of elbow bending.

It was one afternon at Tunney's camp that Mr. Wiggins happened to mention that one of the lads the evening before had imbibed a "Mickey Finn" along with his ale and that Mr. Pegler, among others, enjoyed the laugh. At which time Mr. Tunney inquired as to exactly what was a "Mickey Finn," and Mr. Wiggins, as an all-American "Micky Finn" dispenser, replied in great detail, explaining that the Finn is an obnoxious powder which quickly makes one very sea sick on land.

Mr. Tunney, it seems, had already worked up an excellent hate for Mr. Pegler on account of some pieces that Mr. Pegler had written which did not exactly suit Mr. Tunney. So, according to Mr. Ray Alvis, Mr. Tunney ups and says plainly to Mr. Wiggins that it is worth a hundred bucks to him if Mr. Wiggins drops a "Micky Finn" in Mr. Pegler's ale.

The 100 bucks, besides the fun in it, instantly appealed to Mr. Wiggins' fun-loving nature and without a thought of the loss of his A. A. U. card certifying him as a "Micky Finn" dropper for sports sake, he promised Mr. Tunney an expert job that very evening.

Mr. Wiggins had reckoned rightly that Mr. Pegler would be at the tavern that evening and in no time at all Mr. Wiggins and Mr. Pegler were hoisting the ale with great frequency, to say nothing of relish. In fact, Mr. Wiggins had beaten Mr. Pegler to the tavern by several hours, as was his wont, and had already imbibed enough ale to float the Queen Mary, or at least the Normandie.

But even in his cups Mr. Wiggins did not lose sight of his mission, and so when Mr. Pegler was called from the table by a phone message, leaving his ale exposed to Mr. Wiggins' mercies, Mr. Wiggins reached in his vest pocket, plucked out a "Micky Finn" and deftly dropped it into Mr. Pegler's glass. Something apparently was detaining Mr. Pegler, but finally he returned, but not before Mr. Wiggins, in his solicitude, had stowed away another half-dozen bottles of the amber fluid. Sitting down, Mr. Pegler fingered his glass, hoisted it and made ready to drink, when—— —

Mr. Wiggins, now thoroughly drenched with the stuff, somehow acquired the pangs of remorse for his act. "Whoa," he shrieked, and it was a crying jag. "Say, you ain't such a bad guy," blurted out Mr. Wiggins as he grabbed Mr. Pegler's glass. "Don't drink that stuff." Thereupon the wet-eyed Mr. Wiggins broke down and confessed all, not failing to mention Mr. Tunney's hundred bucks that had inspired him. And that, my children, is supposed to be how come Mr. Pegler does not like Mr. Tunney very much, although Mr. Wiggins is now one of his favorite people.

Sporty Charles Town Track Opens Today for 31 Days of Racing

Wise Sister Favored in Feature

By Walter Haight.

The Charles Town press agent must have been butting his brains against an adding machine when he wrote the following, "A Decoration Day crowd of 15,000 is en route here by train, plane and automobile." And he must have had just one too many when he wrote that "representatives of 56 American and Canadian newspapers are already on the grounds." Charles Town will consider it a very profitable day if 5,000 cash customers attend and two other guys and myself will comprise the press.

However, the press agent doesn't exaggerate when he says that the sporty West Virginia course will be open for business this afternoon—the business of hustling the horses and rustling the $2 bills. He has the post time right, too. At 2:30 p. m., a field of 4-year-old and upward horses will ankle postward to begin the thunder of hooves that will bounce off the adjacent mountains until sundown on Fourth of July.

The name of Thomas C. Bradley among the stewards stands out in bold relief. He is the man who made the whole plant toe the mark last year and is credited with putting the 6-furlong course on the map. With Bradley to rule the jockeys and horsemen and with General Manager Al Boyle to take care of the overhead, Charles Town will be leveling.

Race Secretary Fred Burton made the most of the material on hand in arranging a first-class opening day, holiday and week-end program. The Decoration Day Handicap would have drawn a good spot on the average Pimlico card. Although only 8 will start, 13 horses are named overnight for the 7-furlong test. Outstanding in the group are J. B. Belk's Wise Sister, the likely favorite; H. M. Simpson's Prince Turley, Mrs. A. S. Bowman's Genie Palatine and Mrs. E. L. Bull's Tuleyries Wand. The race is the sixth on the eight-race program.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will run its usual special train, leaving Union Station here at 12:30 p. m. The special will stop at Rockville a half hour later and also will pick up passengers at Brunswick. Due to the traffic bridge being down at Harpers Ferry, motorists on the Maryland side of the Potomac can park their cars and catch the special at Brunswick at 1:40 p. m. Those who want to go the entire route by auto via Maryland, can cross the Potomac at Brunswick or Williamsport.

Washingtonians traveling by auto are offered the shortest and best route, through Leesburg and Clarkes Gap. The Charles Town track is located on that peninsula of West Virginia that reaches a point at Harpers Ferry. Thirty-one racing days are scheduled.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUNANSTAY, $67.20, $24.70, $8.00; ARDOR, $24.70, $10.90; STEPEE, $4.00.

RUNANSTAY, benefited by the poor start, took command opening quarter to win driving from ARDOR. Latter, also away well, was gaining at end. STEPEE came from far back last half. BUSY TONEY had no chance with start. Ran remarkable race once under way, but tired in stretch.

SECOND RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:56. Off at 2:57. Winner, John White's b. f. (4), by Mayne—Bountiful. Trained by E. Williams. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:16 2-5, 1:22 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORA KAY, $8.60, $4.30, $3.90; HANDLEY, $3.30, $3.20; PRINCE PETTIE, $7.00.

CORA KAY, away slowly, worked her way up gradually, was bothered by HANDLEY leaving backstretch, but came again to win handily. HANDLEY broke fast, took command opening quarter, but wasn't good enough. PRINCE PETTIE dropped back after breaking fast and came with rush in final quarter. CHISEL came from well back last half. FLOWER TIME, on outside throughout, showed fine early speed, but quit badly in stretch.

THIRD RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:26. Off at 3:28. Winner, J. H. Whiteley's br. m. (6), by J. Fred A.—Tacyc. Trained by D. Yates. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:17, 1:23.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINTIE, $15.70, $7.40, $5.80; SKY RIDE, $6.20, $5.20; GAY LASS, $6.50.

MINTIE, favored by break when SKY RIDE ran out at first turn, took command and, saving ground thereafter, won driving. SKY RIDE, much the best, ran out at every turn but was going fastest of all at end. GAY LASS closed immense gap from slow beginning. HYPH, away slowly, came well last quarter. DRESSMAKER, in trouble opening quarter, quit under punishment.

DAILY DOUBLE (FIRST AND THIRD RACES) PAID $809.40.

FOURTH RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $400. The Blue Ridge. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:56. Off at 3:57. Winner, Mrs. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLOSILDA, $4.60, $2.50, $2.50; WISE MONEY, $2.60, $2.50; LADY BUCK, $3.40.

FLOSILDA, powerfully ridden and on the outside throughout, ran stride for stride with WISE MONEY into the stretch, where she drew away to win driving. WISE MONEY, caught it out kamely with the winner, but hung at end. LADY BUCK, well up throughout, had no excuses. WHISKORA ran an even race. Others were outmatched.

FIFTH RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:25. Off at 4:28. Winner, H. Foote's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HELEN BAB, $19.30, $8.20, $5.90; BAY WRACK, $5.70, $3.50; PUKKA HEAVEN, $5.80.

HELEN BAB showed early foot to first turn, took long lead going down backstretch, saved ground at turns and just lasted to win. BAY WRACK, slow to settle in his stride, closed with rush but was blocked leaving backstretch; was taken over land route thereafter and just missed. PUKKA HEAVEN forced the early pace, but tired last quarter. INFILEE, on outside throughout, can do better.

Freight Traffic Continues Rise Over Last Year

Total of 683,406 Cars in May 23 Week Is Gain of 14.2 Per Cent.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended May 23 totaled 683,406 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 85,010 cars or 14.2 per cent above the corresponding week in 1935 and 57,416 cars or 9.2 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934. Loading of revenue freight for the week of May 23 was an increase of 1,959 cars or .3 per cent above the preceding week.

Loading of merchandise less-than-carload-lot freight totaled 162,096 cars, a decrease of 173 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 4,862 cars above the corresponding week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 2,073 cars below the same week in 1934.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 31,365 cars, an increase of 808 cars above the preceding week, 5,553 cars above the corresponding week in 1935 and 3,112 cars above the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading the week ended May 23 totaled 19,325 cars, an increase of 497 cars above the preceding week this year, and 2,901 cars above the same week in 1935.

Livestock loading amounted to 11,153 cars, a decrease of 519 cars below the preceding week, 188 cars below the same week in 1935, and 5,160 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended May 23 totaled 8,422 cars, a decrease of 769 cars below the preceding week this year and 367 cars below the same week in 1935.

All districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding weeks in 1935 and 1934.

Schwab Optimistic On Business Future

New York, May 29 (AP).—Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, returning today from Europe on the S. S. Bremen, said he is "more optimistic than ever."

Questioned on conditions in Germany, the veteran steel man said they "looked fine" and added the country will develop very fast. "I find the industrialists in Germany are with Hitler," Schwab said. "They think he is going to bring order out of chaos."

Netherlands Moves To Halt Gold Loss

Amsterdam, Netherlands, May 29 (AP).—The Bank of the Netherlands today raised its discount rate to 3½ per cent from 2½ per cent. The raise becomes effective tomorrow.

The bank has lost a considerable portion of its gold stock through withdrawals recently. Some uncertainty regarding the future status of the guilder maintains in view of the devaluation scare on the French franc. Financial authorities said it might be difficult to hold the guilder on the gold standard should the franc be devalued.

Telephone Net Up 14 Per Cent For 4 Months

Chesapeake & Potomac Also Reports Gain for April.

Net operating revenues of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for four months ended April 30 were $729,752, which compares with $639,846 in the first four months of last year, or a gain of about 14 per cent, according to the report filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission. April net was $200,716, against $185,440 in April last year.

Gross operating revenues for the four months were $3,539,569, which compares with $3,316,092 in the corresponding months of 1935. April gross was $904,218, compared with $857,458 in April last year.

Operating expenses for the four months were $2,465,400, which compare with $2,322,570 in the same period of 1935. April expenses were $614,018, compared with $578,099 in April last year.

Washington was served by 205,731 telephones on April 30, this years as compared with 193,858 on the same date in 1935, a net increase of 11,873 telephones. The cost of telephone plant in service this year was $37,935,171, according to John A. Remon, general manager of the company.

Farmers, Housewives Biggest Pit Traders

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—The largest group of traders on the Chicago Board of Trade is composed of farmers, a survey by the Grain Futures Administration of the Department of Agriculture indicated today. Housewives rank second in number.

The survey also revealed that most dealings in grain futures are made by small speculators, who have, to a large extent, replaced the large operators who dealt on the exchange two decades and more ago.

The analysis was made in a study of open commitments in wheat and corn futures as of September 29, 1934. It showed nearly half of the speculative "long" accounts were held by traders with less than 5,000 bushels each and more than 90 per cent of all dealers had less than 25,000 bushels each.

Important Markets Are Closed Today

New York, May 29 (AP).—Virtually all important security and commodity exchanges in the United States will be closed tomorrow in observance of Memorial Day. The New Orleans Cotton Exchange and the naval stores markets in Savannah and Jacksonville will function as usual.

Most of the European exchanges will suspend business tomorrow and all will be closed Monday for the Whitsuntide holiday. The London money, gold, silver and produce and the Liverpool provision markets will be open Saturday.

Principal Canadian markets will carry on regular operations Saturday and Monday.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stocks Move Higher in Quiet Pre-Holiday Trading; Sterling Rises to $5.

New York, May 29.—The approaching holiday cast its shadow over the markets and accentuated the dullness. Prices in stocks were firm in nearly every section, but turnover was less than three-quarters of a million shares. Prices were best near the close. Government bonds were mixed. September wheat closed a quarter of a cent higher at 84⅝ cents a bushel.

Early trading brought sharp advances in a number of stocks and firmer prices in most sections. It was discovered that the market has become thin on the upper as well as on the lower side, and moderate buying sufficed to push prices forward. Trading at the start was fairly heavy, for cash, in Great Northern rights, which expire Monday.

Gold Shares Rise.

The gold stock section was stronger than it has been for several days. Speculators regarded the gold mines as a precautionary bet against the possibility of franc and guilder devaluation over the holiday weekend, for it has been assumed that abandonment of gold by France and Holland would increase the demand for gold among central banks, and possibly among individual hoarders as well. On the last point, much depends on the methods adopted in France, if action be decided upon. Swift devaluation and return to gold ought to release much money from hoarding and bring out gold for resale to the market.

With preparations under way for the raising of billions in new money with which to meet bonus payments, the probable recipients of the money to be spent came in for attention. Farm implements were strong, notably Case. Motor shares firmed. In the miscellaneous list, Monsanto Chemical continued to climb. Commercial Credit jumped on a higher dividend vote. Foster Wheeler, United Dyewood and Union Bag turned strong. Several preferred issues developed buoyancy.

Active Financial Month.

Railroad shares were higher in response to the gain in freight car loadings reported for last week and the prospect of heavy passenger traffic over the holidays. Airplanes were firm, but less active. Most of the steels recovered yesterday's losses. Unwonted activity and strength developed in the leather company stocks.

Month-end occurring with week-end, and the increased cash use over the holidays, combined to give a fairly large turnover in the money market, but the pressure of excess reserves was too great for any change in rates. Dividend distributions today and on Monday total large, but less than will those at the end of next month, when interest payments also are heavy. Next month promises to be an exceptionally active one financially.

Markets Well Supported.

Although this week hasn't done much to restore business activity, progress in prices from the April setback has been fairly consistent. Speculative bonds have followed stocks, but Treasury issues have weakened a little under the impact of the news that the Government would refund a billion next month and raise a billion of new money.

So far as money rates are concerned, nothing appeared to suggest any tightening of interest; on the contrary another $40,000,000 was added to excess bank reserves.

Excess reserves ordinarily would rise further this summer, with the huge disbursement of funds planned for the soldiers and farmers bonuses, but the Treasury, it is said, will do something to offset that building up of bank deposits by drawing down its own bank deposits and by maintaining a hefty account at the Federal Reserve banks. The current nevertheless is running toward easy money. Something might be done to take up slack is security markets were allowed full speculative liberty, but the reverse is true. Business activity, while increasing, is not yet ready to make an impression on the credit reserves.

Dividend Meetings.

Next week will be a busy time for corporation directors. A large number of dividend meetings will be held. On Monday several small companies, including Celanese, will meet. On Tuesday American Express, American Smelting, Homestake, International Shoe, Mack Trucks, Penney and Youngstown will hold their meetings, followed the next day by American Snuff, General Printing Ink, Lehman, National Tea, United States Tobacco and probably North American. Later in the week are scheduled Devoe & Raynolds, Hercules Motor, Reynolds Tobacco, Acme Steel, Central Aguirre and National Enameling. Current yields on only a few companies are high enough to raise doubts as to dividend maintenance. In that number are Continental Diamond Fibre, 12.5 per cent; Lambert, 9.5 per cent, and Pfeiffer Brewing, 8 per cent. Among the lowest yields are those of American Smelting, 2.1 per cent; Homestake, 2.5 per cent, and Waukesha Motor, at 2.6 per cent, which raise some hopes of higher dividends.

Holiday Rumors.

Today the foreign exchange market heard the usual gossip that all manner of things would happen in France and maybe elsewhere, and that when New York opened Monday and the Paris market returned from its holiday Tuesday the things would have been accomplished. Holidays provide good opportunities for financial juggling incident to establishing a new monetary base, but in view of the fact that the new French cabinet does not take office until June 9 the more conservative foreign exchange men took the view that no devaluation was likely to occur over the week-end. In view of their own field day on Monday most of them sincerely hoped there would be no unusual events.

Sterling Futures.

The widening of the discount on sterling futures—the three months' delivery got down to a discount of a full cent—was taken to mean a little short selling of sterling by Wall street interests who grow increasingly bearish as the pound approaches the $5 mark and bullish as it approaches the lower $4.90's. The rise in demand sterling to $5 today did not reflect strength in British exchange, but weakness in francs in London. Spot francs continued to hover around the lower gold point, supported by more gold engagements, while guilders derived moderate stimulation from the rise in the Dutch bank rate—the second this year. Since Holland has lost to this country only about $11,000,000 from April 24, when the foreign gold currencies began their latest sinking spell, the action of Netherlands bank was viewed as a precautionary act.

Ardrey Extols Insured Loans As Investment

By Gerald G. Gross.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 29.—The merits of insured mortgages as an investment guaranteed by the Federal Housing Administration were impressed upon the District Bankers Association today by J. Howard Ardrey, assistant to the FHA administration.

Outlining the numerous advantages to lending banks of the FHA mutual mortgage insurance plan, Ardrey stressed the following features: Security; broad market for the sale of insured mortgages; banks may borrow at low interest rates from the Federal Home Loan banks on insured mortgages up to 90 per cent of face value; eligibility of the mortgages as securtiy for public deposits in many States and an attractive rate of 5 per cent.

"At the present time," said Ardrey, "4,132 separate institutions, many of them with branches, are actively making insured loans. It is significant that the largest proportion of insured mortgages are being made by commercial banks—36.3 per cent by national banks and 32 per cent by State banks."

4,492 Loans Here.

In the same connection, James C. Dulin, jr., chairman of the associations credit bureau committee, reported that the outstanding credit development during the past year was in the increased use of Federal Housing Administration loans. For the year ended last April 30, he said, Washington banks granted 4,492 loans aggregating $2,032,805. In addition to bank loans, other Washington agencies which included industrial houses and real estate and finance companies granted 656 loans aggregating $257,349.

Responsibilities of banks which offer sale deposit box service to patrons was described in an address prepared by Albert E. Fisher, manager of the Riggs National Bank safe deposit department and delivered by Thomas J. Groom, of the Bank of Commerce and Savings. Citing the many different types of abuse which may result if insufficient attention is paid this service by the banks' officers, Fisher said:

"Know the problems of your safe deposit department; appreciate its responsibilities and hazards; realize the importance of the safe deposit section, its discussion of questions, problems, methods of operation and administration. Recognize the benefits of group meetings and conventions, with attendant contacts with national leaders in safe deposit thought."

Simpler Mortgages.

Speaking on foreclosure procedure in the District of Columbia, G. B. Craighill ureged that mortgages be drafted with greater simplicity and forethought.

"In my opinion," said the speaker, a member of the law firm of McKenny, Flannery Craighill, "the time has certainly arrived for the formation of a society for the simplification of mortgages. Otherwise the courts may find it necessary to issue writs de lunatico inquirendo, to ascertain whether the lawyers, who write and attempt to interpret such documents, are of sound mind. The poor innocent purchaser of a bond is presumed, in law, to have notice of the entire contents of these voluminous documents."

"The advantages and disadvantages to banks of the trend toward amortized loans," which won first prize in the essay contest of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, was read to the delegates today by its author, Roland Taylor Carr, of Riggs National.

"The experience of banks in the past two or three years," said Carr, "has demonstrated rather forcibly that the trend toward amortized loans has resulted in certain clearly defined advantages. Notable among such advantages are greater opportunities for profit and diversification, the employment of otherwise idle funds, a closer contact with the general public and a more constant supervision of credits.

"Perhaps the only real disadvantage which presents itself in the consideration of amortized loans is the fact that such loans are more expensive to handle from the standpoint of the clerical work involved. Even this consideration, however, is offset in the case of personal loans by reason of the fact that a much higher interest rate is obtainable, which should compensate for the additional work required."

J. Earle McGeary, past president of the Capital's I. A. B. chapter, outlined the development of the institute's educational program.

The final business session will be held tomorrow, featuring an address by Dr. Adolph C. Miller, member of the Federal Reserve Board from 1914 to 1936.

Standard Power Output.

Chicago, May 29.—Electric output of Standard Gas & Electric Co. for the week ended May 23, totaled 95,968,428 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 21.4 per cent, compared with the corresponding week last year.

Bankers Grain Prices.

The rooms of the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce will be closed today, Memorial Day. There will be no issue of this report.

Market steady.

FLOUR—Receipts, 3,814 barrels, including 210 barrels by shipment.

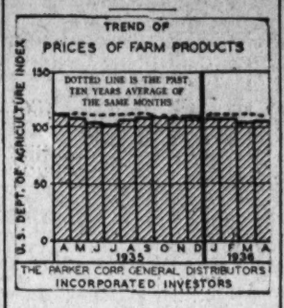
STRAW—Market steady; wheat straw, No. 1, per ton, 7.00; oat straw, 7.00.

Farm Prices Average 5½% Under Year Ago



Boston, Mass., May 29. The prices of farm products in April, taking all groups, averaged about 5½ per cent less than a year ago. The only large group increasing was meat animals which jumped 7 per cent over April of last year. Despite the lower farm prices, the farmers received from marketings in the first quarter a cash income appreciably greater than in the same 1935 months.

New Regulations Depress Wheat

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—Jolted by virtual Congressional enactment of the commodity exchange bill that includes drastic new measures to regulate grain trading, wheat prices underwent late setbacks today. A quick tumble of more than a cent a bushel practically wiped out upturns the wheat market had scored earlier in the day as a result of drought and unseasonable high temperatures in spring crop areas both north and south of the Canadian boundary.

Wheat closed nervous at a slight rally, unchanged to half-cent up, compared with yesterday's finish; July, 84¼@84⅜; September, 84⅜@84½; December, 86¼. Corn, one-half off to one-eighth up; July, 59½@59⅝; September, 57½@57⅝; December, 52¾. Oats, five-eights to 1 cent advanced; July, 25⅝. Rye at one-eighth decline to three-eighths gain; July, 53¾. In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 12 cents decline.

Capital Transit 4 Months' Loss Totals $50,815

The Capital Transit Co. in its report filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission reveals that for the four-month period ending April 3 there was a net loss of $50,815.22, which compares with a net income of $282,211.06, for the same period last year. April net income was $33,847.16, compared with $119,895.85, in 1935, a decrease of 71.7 per cent.

Operating revenues for the four months were $3,337,837.01, compared with $2,995,503.59, last year, an increase of 41.4 per cent. The same item for the month amounted to $875,384.51, which compares with $796,824.67 a year ago, an increase of 9.9 per cent. Operating expenses totaled $2,653,788.77 in the four months this year, compared with $2,124,788.73, for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 24.9 per cent. The month's expenses of $657,377.77, compared with $525,807.80, in 1935, an increase of 25 per cent.

Operating Income.

Operating income for the four months was $147,463.80, which compares with $451,652.93 last year, a decrease of 67.4 per cent. Operating income last month of $82,753.51 compared with $162,180.36 a year ago decreased 49 per cent.

Gross income of $166,544.77 compared with $505,556.91 in 1935 decreased 67.4 per cent, and deductions from gross income of $217,359.49 compared with $223,345.85 a year ago decreased 2.7 per cent. The monthly gross income of $87,079.91 decreased 50.4 per cent when compared with last year's total of $175,653.18. Deductions for the month of $53,232.75 compared with $56,257.33 a year ago decreased 5.4 per cent.

Merrill Will Direct Company's Operations

Edward D. Merrill has been elected vice president and general manager of the Capital Transit Co., and next week, in the absence of President John H. Hanna, he will assume active charge of the company's operations. Mr. Hanna has been in ill health and is leaving on a long vacation.

The position of general manager was created for Mr. Merrill and his election is a consequence of plans, approved by the commission, for merger of the W. R. T. with the Capital Transit Co. While steps are being taken for dissolution of the W. R. T., there already is interchangeable operation of the two concerns, with free transfers on payment of a 10-cent cash fare.

Mr. Merrill has seen service in bus and street car transportation service in Seattle, Chicago and Philadelphia, as well as about 10 years here as president of the W. R. T. Both the Capital Transit Co. and the W. R. T., as well as the Potomac Electric Power Co. are controlled by the North American Co., large utilities holding company.

Society Man Slain In Dispute Over Bill

Managua, Nicaragua, May 29. (U.P.) A. B. Downey, 36, of Boston, Mass., chief accountant and assistant manager of the Central American Power Co. in Nicaragua and United Press corerspondent, was shot and killed today by Adan Talavera, Nicaraguan cattle buyer, allegedly as result of an argument over an electric light bill.

Downey is survived by his wife, Bertha, a former Nicaraguan beauty queen, two children, Patsy Ann and Mary Lou, and his mother, Mrs. Nelly Downey, of North Easton, Mass.

Downey was shot at 4 p. m. while lunching with friends in the Gambrinus Restaurant. Talavera allegedly walked over to his table and shot him through the shoulder and then shot him twice through the chest when Downey struggled for the gun. Talavera was arrested.

Downey was prominent in foreign society circles, an ardent golfer and a good all-around athlete.

Senate Study Approved On Freeing Puerto Rico

By the Associated Press.

A study by a committee of 15 of the subject of Puerto Rican independence was approved today by the Senate Insular Affairs Committee.

The committee also approved, with amendments drafted by the Interior Department, a Puerto Rican election reform bill introduced by Chairman Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), Maryland.

A third measure recommended for Senate approval by the committee would permit Puerto Rico to share in Federal aid for highways.

ness houses participating in the plan. They could not be placed in the bank.

The employer who paid his workers in the certificates would, of course, have to accept them in payment for whatever products he sells.

At the end of a year the certificate would be redeemable for $1 in currency at the District Building. It would then have accrued $1.06 from the 53 weekly 2-cent stamps. The six cents would pay the administrative and printing costs.

Mrs. Greenway admitted that strict policing of the system and rigid restrictions, issued by the District Commissioners, are necessary if the plan should be adopted. For instance, not more than 25 cents cash would be allowed in change for a $1 certificate; that is, 75 cents in merchandise must be bought by the holder to obtain full value. Otherwise a holder might make a 5-cent purchase and pocket 95 cents in silver.

"For some weeks there have been meetings of various merchants among themselves and with the Commissioners to consider the plan proposed in this resolution," Mrs. Greenway declared in a formal statement.

"That while no organizations nor the Commissioners have actually indorsed this plan, a number of public-spirited industrialists and merchants have expressed their willingness to co-operate in this test in the District as a laboratory for the same problem throughout the Nation on the assumption that if successful it could be copied by other communities and eventually become the Nation's system of employing and financing employable persons in established industry.

"When successful, this plan will eliminate the necessity of artificially created employment through Federal agencies. It will eliminate the constantly increasing taxes and Government interference in business, and give the man or woman who wants to work the right to do so on the prevailing wage scale with a chance for promotion on merit.

"This is decidedly not inflationary; in fact, it is just the contrary. It is essentially no different and basically more certain and sound than a bond issue. A bond issue is spent today to be repaid over 20 or 30 years at heavy interest charges, while the anticipatory revenue issue creates new business and redeems itself through the new business it creates in one year and without interest charges."

REP. ISABELLA GREENWAY.

She exhibited a chart showing how a $1 certificate might be utilized to do $10 worth of business within a week at an actual cost of only 2 cents.

The plan, which Mrs. Greenway proposes to try to get ratified at this session of Congress, would be financed by only a $5,000 revolving fund, payable out of the revenue of the District to be used in printing the initial allotment of certificates and stamps.

The resolution authorizes and directs the District Commissioners to "call for volunteers under this plan" and to launch it "when in their discretion a sufficient number of qualified employers have agreed to co-operate."

Referred to the House District Committee, the resolution probably will be brought before the committee next week. Because of the nearness of adjournment and the priority of other District legislation, however, its prospects for House action are dubious.

Mrs. Greenway has announced previously that she will not be a candidate for re-election.

Capital to Honor War Dead

will speak. Harlin Wood, past American Legion department commander, will recite Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address."

The Memorial Day Corporation yesterday renewed its plea for cut flowers to strew on the graves of soldiers buried in the national cemetery. Flowers will be placed on the graves of all Grand Army men in the cemetery.

Preceding the principal service at Arlington Cemetery, members of the Vincent B. Costello Post, No. 15, American Legion, will meet at the grave of the hero for whom their post is named for a service of tribute. Costello was the first District employe to be killed in action in the World War.

Senator Louis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington, will deliver the principal address. Joseph J. Malloy, department commander, American Legion, will also speak. The choir of the Church of the Immaculate Conception will sing, and the Rev. Joseph E. Gedra, assistant pastor of the church, will give the benediction. The Rev. Howard E. Snyder, department American Legion chaplain, will deliver the invocation. Charles Kohen, past post commander, is chairman.

Roosevelt to Place Wreath.

The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier will be visited by representatives of many patriotic societies, and during the day many wreaths will be placed there. President Roosevelt will place a wreath there as he enters the amphitheater grounds. Col. Wallach A. McCathran will be master of ceremonies at wreath laying services beginning at 11:45 a. m.

Lieut. Col. E. Lombard, military attache to the French Embassy, will lay a wreath at the tomb at 9:30 a. m. He will place it there in the name of the French colony of San Francisco, and of the French veterans of San Francisco and Alameda counties.

The memory of Robert Mills, designer of the Washington Monument, the Treasury Building, the old Patent Office, and many other public buildings, will be honored by the American Institute of Architects this morning. Architects, in the name of the institute, will meet at the Mills grave in Congressional Cemetery at 9:45 a. m. for brief ceremonies. Mrs. Robert Mills Evans, granddaughter of the designer, will unveil a monument just completed over the grave.

Students to Pay Tribute.

Seniors of the Georgetown University Law School will pay tribute to the 30 law students of the school who were killed in the World War. Col. Allen W. Gullion, of the Judge Advocate's division will speak.

Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, will speak at a labor memorial service over radio station WJSV at 11:30 a. m. Several representatives of the Central Labor Union will be heard.

A memorial mass will be held at 9 a. m. in the Immaculate Conception Church in honor of the late Rev. Francis J. Hurney by Father Hurney Post of Catholic war veterans.

Father Hurney was pastor of the church until he died in 1933. He also served as an Army chaplain during the World War. Preceding the mass there will be a parade from the Knights of Columbus Hall at Tenth and K streets northwest in which the St. John's Cadets will march along with the veterans and friends of Father Hurney.

To Suspend Business.

Business for the most part will be suspended while these events, and many others planned by civic and social organizations for the day, take place. Government departments, with few exceptions, will be closed, as will department stores and other business houses in the downtown district.

Some employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing will work today and tomorrow, to rush the veterans' bonus bonds. The bureau is scheduled to have the bonds ready for postal delivery June 15.

The main postoffice and the Benjamin Franklin station will remain open for the sale of stamps. Other stations will be closed. The public library will also suspend service for the day.

District Commander Joseph Malloy, American Legion, addressed the assembly honoring deceased members of the George E. Killeen Post, American Legion, last night at Grace Episcopal Church. George Killeen, for whom the post is named, was among the first of the Georgetown soldiers to enter war service and he was one of the first to be killed.

The Jewish service at Washington Hebrew Congregation was conducted by the Temple and Washington Post, No. 58, of the Jewish War Veterans. Services were conducted by Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, assistant to the rabbi of the temple. The temple choir sang and the drum and bugle corps of the Fort Stevens Post, American Legion, took part in the service.

The Washington Youth Council staged the rites at the Titanic Memorial. The program, at which Elwood Street, director of public welfare, presided, was intended as a tribute to America's peace-time heroes—firemen, policemen, doctors, nurses and other men and women who render public service in times of peace.

Tribute Is Paid To Peace-Time Heroes of D. C.

The observance was led by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; S. T. Porter, battalion chief of the fire department and Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War.

Libby said:

"We should be false to ourselves and to our hopes of a better world if we gave our youth the impression that they can become heroes only through another war. They should learn to recognize their own opportunities for heroism in callings that are not generally recognized as heroic."

He praised nurses, doctors, policemen, firemen, locomotive engineers, airplane pilots, industrial workers and scientists, for "their quiet courage that expects no glory."

The service, which has been held for the last three years, was arranged by the Washington Youth Council, and sponsored by a committee of 29 prominent Washingtonians. Its president, William Firth, spoke in behalf of the council.

$243,737 Contract On Water Job Let

A contract covering important expansion of the District water main system was awarded by the District Commissioners yesterday to the Columbia Foundation Co., of Washington, for $243,737.

The contract calls for laying of three new and larger mains. The pipe is to be of steel, in contrast to the cast iron and concrete pipes which have been laid in the past.

There are to be four jobs. One calls for laying a 30-inch main from Fourth and E streets southwest to Canal and E streets southeast; another for laying a 36-inch main in Upshur street from Seventh to Thirteenth streets northwest; a third for laying a 36-inch main in Spring road from Thirteenth to Eleventh streets and thence south to Kenyon street northwest.

The largest main, 48 inches in diameter, is to be laid out of the pumping station, which is a part of the reservoir and water distribution system called McMillan reservoir. The main is to run from Second and Bryant streets to New Jersey avenue and L street. It is to be laid south on Second to V, to First, to L to New Jersey avenue.

Jury Ascribes O'Leary Death To Negligence

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., May 29 (AP).—A coroner's jury held today that Mrs. William J. O'Leary, 43, of Chevy Chase, Md., died here Sunday from burns received in a fever-producing machine through the "simple negligence" of the device's inventor, listed as P. E. Dettra. Her husband, William J. O'Leary, is employed in the Bureau of Public Roads.

The 42-year-old Dettra, who came here recently from Jersey City, N. J., was ordered held under $2,500 bond pending presentation of the case to the Broward County grand jury when it convenes. He originally was arrested and placed in jail on a temporary warrant charging manslaughter.

W. G. Miller, county prosecuting attorney, said he would have a warrant issued charging the prisoner with practicing medicine without a license.

Mrs. O'Leary became unconscious and died following a treatment for chronic arthritis in the artificial-fever machine. An autopsy showed her body to have been burned severely.

Dettra did not testify before the coroner's jury, but Mrs. Thomas S. Jacks, owner of the establishment where the machine was installed, said she believed Mrs. O'Leary died from shock and not from excessive heat. She asserted the burns on Mrs. O'Leary's body were caused by placing the woman back in the machine in an attempt to revive her.

The treatment, she added, was the thirty-fifth one given Mrs. O'Leary in the machine over a six months' period.

The machine is an unholstered table-like device with electric wire coils, and a rubber blanket which covers the patient and the apparatus. The coroner's jury was told the machine was used to raise the body temperature of persons to about 105 degrees.

Culbertson On Bridge

The complete independence of bidding and play is recognized by every expert worthy of the name. Indeed, it is unfair to present a hand to a player with the question, "How would play a four spade contract?" unless, at the same time, the detailed bidding is accurately stated. The most important of these details is whether the final contract was doubled or not and, if so, by which adversary.

In today's hand, for instance, an expert declarer based his entire play on the fact that he had been doubled by a defender whom he knew to be conservative in doubling for penalties.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	2 dimds.	3 clubs	Double
3 spades	Pass	4 spades	Pass
Pass	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

West opened the king of diamonds and, when his partner played the deuce, switched to his singleton club. Dummy's ace won the trick, and declarer now went into quite a huddle. Two facts were apparent, the first of which was that East had doubled three clubs on little except a long club suit. Also, the only high cards that West could hold were the ace and king of diamonds and, therefore, it was a ten-to-one chance that he had the guarded queen of trumps as well.

It looked bad. There apparently was no way to avoid the loss of two diamonds, one heart and one spade. But, rather than give up, the declarer decided to embark on a line of play that would offer at least a chance for his contract if West should slip a little. He therefore led a low club from dummy and ruffed low in his own hand, actually hoping that he would be overruffed. West did overruff and fell squarely into the trap that was laid for him.

The only suit that he could have led safely at this point was trumps; but, holding the queen and another, he felt that there was a good chance of making the queen, and decided to lay down the diamond king, feeling that inasmuch as dummy had begun with only two diamonds, it could do no harm. He soon learned that he was wrong.

A third diamond lead went to South's queen, while dummy discarded a low heart. Now the ace and king of trump were led, felling the queen, after which declarer had only to cash his two high hearts and ruff the third round in dummy for his contract.

Had West led a heart after he overruffed the club, the result would have been the same, inasmuch as declarer then could have won all three heart tricks.

On The Air Today

Now Radio City is to have competition as a show spot in Manhattan. Columbia announces the purchase of 29,000 square feet of ground on the southeast corner of Park avenue and Fifty-ninth street, on which a super-modern C. B. S. buildings is to be erected to house network studios and operations.

This move has been in the air for a long time. One of those things to come about soon or late, with N. B. C.'s plant attracting tousands of visitors week in and week out. Obviously, the publicity value to the network has been enormous, with transients seeking the Rockefeller Center radio center as one of the city's principal show spots, and New Yorkers invariably saying to the visiting firemen, Have you seen Radio City?

And the result has been, of course, that radio broadcasting and Radio City and National Broadcasting Co. have become synonymous to many, many persons.

Columbia apparently intends to shift this balance and to share in the attention of the thousands who include radio studios in their Manhattan sight-seeing schedules. In fact, I read into the new plant announcement an intention to bring the area in which it is building the first major development of entertainment and amusement enterprise.

At present the site is occupied by nothing kindred to the show business. Building plans and the construction date have not yet been announced. The present Columbia headquarters are in a building at 485 Madison avenue, not far from the new site.

Nicaraguan Kills American Citizen

San Jose, C. R., May 29 (U.P.).—Several Atlantic Coast towns in Nicaragua are in the hands of national guards officers who deposed local authorities, and the country is on the verge of civil war, according to reports reaching here tonight.

National guardsmen replaced the deposed officials with partisans of Gen. Anastasio Somoza, chief of the national guard.

President Leon Cortes announced Costa Rica will maintain strict neutrality in Nicaraguan internal affairs. He ordered the frontier strengthened by increased guards to prevent any invasion of Costa Rican territory by opposing forces.

Heroic Play of Foreign Legion Still Is Potent

Ouida Story Hit at Palace; Gay Musical at Earle; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"UNDER TWO FLAGS." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the novel by Ouida, adapted to the screen by W. P. Lipscomb and Walter Ferris, starring Ronald Colman and Claudette Colbert, with Victor McLaglen, Rosalind Russell, Gregory Ratoff, Nigel Bruce, C. Henry Gordon, Herbert Mundin, John Carradine, Lumsden Hare, Fritz Leiber, William Ricciardi, Frank Reicher, Francis McDonald, Nicholas Soussanin and Gaston Glass. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Previewed Tuesday, May 26.

Staged with a sweep that seems as broad as the Sahara itself, alive with picturesque action and by no means remiss in the matter of romance and heart interest, this new filmization of a familiar story that long has been a standby of both the stage and the screen transcends any of its predecessors in either medium.

BELL.

Always a source of fascination and exotic mystery, the French Foreign Legion has figured in many works of fiction and many pseudo-historical dramatic narratives. By its very cosmopolitanism, it possesses material for flamboyant drama that cannot be surpassed in thrill, variety or suspense. No author has succeeded in capturing and capitalizing these qualities more expertly than Ouida in her expansive novel of "Under Two Flags." Here in a compact group, marooned at the edge of the desert in constant fear of Arab perfidy and native revolt against the meager garrison commanded by Maj. Doyle, are members of the British aristocracy and diplomatic corps, high officers of state, an enlisted Englishman of distinguished birth, Cigarette, the "daughter of the regiment," conducting her squalid little cafe and "mothering" the troops, and the motley crew of the Legion—shifty, secretive and valorous.

Cast Is "All-Star."

The deep-seated jealousies that occasion official transgressions of murderous purpose; heroism such as only dire emergencies and imminent peril can inspire, flirtations, badinage, intrigue—all these go to make up the brilliantly patterned fabric of this durable old drama that has engaged the interest of discriminating theatergoers for decades on end and tempted the talents of many of the theater's foremost artists. It is here elaborated in scene, emblazoned with all the artistry of modern photography and glorified by the thoughtful impersonation of its pivotal characters by one of those infrequent casts that deserves to be known as "all-star."

Moving with directness and diverting touches of illuminating byplay, ranging from Sergt. Victor's invasion of Lady Venetia's apartment, to recover a memento that will reveal his real identity if not reclaimed, to his knife-throwing contest with the impetuous Cigarette in the smoke-laden obscurity of her lamp-lit bistro, the surging melodrama of the story progresses to a vividly realistic battle climax among the sand dunes of the Sahara. It is in this rattle of gunfire that Cigarette lays down her life for love of the sergeant denied her by every bar of birth, breeding and background. It is at this juncture too, that Maj. Doyle learns of the injustice of his persecution, Lady Venetia achieves the happiness the spitfire of the desert could not attain and the regiment is drawn up to pay posthumous honor to the girl who proved the greatest hero of them all.

Leads Prove Versatility.

Such is the story turned over to the brilliant talents of a cast that includes Academy Award winners, stars in their own rights and featured players of eminence on both stage and screen. Ronald Colman and Claudette Colbert in the opposing roles of Victor and Cigarette offer characterizations in contrast with those which they most recently have left in memory—Mr. Colman, a far more fiery personality than as Sidney Carton; Miss Colbert, a volatile and capricious anomaly of the barracks remote from Cleopatra and the heroine of "It Happened One Night."

The associates of these two in the quartet of leading principals are Victor McLaglen, not so effective as he was in either "The Informer" or "Professional Soldier," and Rosalind Russell, who seems to me much more competent than she appeared in "Rendezvous."

In the unusually long supporting cast there is not a weak spot of sufficient importance to be noted. Gregory Ratoff, Nigel Bruce, Lumsden Hare, Herbert Mundin, C. Henry Gordon and the numerous others discharge with credit all of the tasks assigned them.

Sidelights and Supplementaries.

Frank Lloyd's direction once more reflects his peculiar capacity for realizing the maximum effect from scenes of far-flung and thickly peopled action. There may be just a suggestion of Custer's last stand and the narrowing circle of the Sioux Indians in the Arab attack on the desert garrison, but the mass effect is so stirring that any new maneuvers attributed to the Riffs might better be overlooked.

One of Chic Sale's inimitable M-G-M featurettes, "Little Boy Blue," a Paramount cartoon comedy in natural color, "Little Stranger," and a double issue of the Metrotone News are the auxiliary attractions that augment the appeal of a particularly sagacious modernization of a sturdy and reliable melodrama that will please all who prefer a little red blood in their screen fare.

"IT'S LOVE AGAIN." Gaumont British picturization of a story by Marion Dix and Lesser Samuels, with additional dialogue by Austin Melford, starring Jessie Matthews, with Robert Young, Sonnie Hale, Ernest Milton, Robb Wilton, Sara Allgood, Cyril Wells, Warren Jenkins, David Horne, Athene Seyler, Robert Hale, Glennis Lorimer and Cyril Raymond. Directed by Victor Saville. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

At last a musical comedy plot has come along in which the show need not necessarily go on!

As a matter of fact, the star precipitates the climax of the picture by deliberately walking out on the first-night performance of a role she has been striving for, against seemingly insuperable obstacles, for years and by her act compels the producer to refund all that money! Revolutionary as this is among the molders of musical comedy formulae, it is only one of the happy innovations that the authors have incorporated in the most gorgeously staged, the cleverest and most tuneful, the best danced and the best sung of the musical frivolities so far imported to the American screen from London.

"It's Love Again" at times is utterly, but delightfully insane—any picture would have to be with that title!—and occasionally strains a little too hard for its bon mots and its wisecracks, but altogether adds up to a melodious, amusing and closely-knit bit of fluff that races along at high velocity and never fails to carry its audience with it.

Is Diversified Pastiming.

The framework of narrative upon which are festooned Jessie Matthews' gay songs and dances, the rivalry of two newspaper columnists, the invention of a fictitious columnar character and the substitution of a struggling young woman for her, with a view to building a celebrity in real life, is fragile but not lacking sufficient cohesion to hang together remarkably well as an excuse for a great deal of fun, some catchy music and its star's expert and versatile dancing.

It is difficult to bring to mind any acting-singing-dancing comedienne on the native screen who is quite the counterpart of this young British star. Perhaps Eleanor Powell is the closest approach—or vice versa—but she is so temperamentally different that the resemblance seems strangely slight. Miss Matthews is a young artiste of unusually rounded capabilities. She plays her role with an engaging ingenuousness that stamps her as quite an actress; she sings with clarity and fine effect and varies her dances from the broken rhythms of "swing" tunes to the more formal measures of the ballroom and ballet routines and the sinuous gyrations of an improvised "temple dance" that finds it unnecessary to define what kind of temple it was! As Elaine Bradford, assuming the name and idiosyncrasies of Mrs. Smythe-Smythe, a daring tiger huntress manufactured on Peter Carlton's typewriter, Miss Matthews contributes by far the most fascinating performance she has brought to the screen on this side to date.

American Leading Man.

Her leading man in this sprightly adventure in columning and show producing is Robert Young, the handsome young American leading man, who encounters nothing here to tax his abilities in the slightest. The comedy lead is Sonnie Hale, long a bulwark of English musical comedy and here cast about as well as he ever has been, in the role of a writer who never quite gets to first base in his efforts to further the Bradford career. The names of the remainder of the cast are not of prime importance to the American public, but not one of the nimble players but turns in an excellent account of himself.

The lyrics of the titular song sometimes make use of such rickety rhymes as "chop suey, hooey and screwy" and a feminine character once remarks that she'd like to try "sitting around a harem all day with a lace curtain hanging in front of your face and being waited on hand and foot by unicorns," but mostly the lines are bright and witty and the whole enlivening affair as literate as any musical comedy has a right to be. The ensemble numbers are staged with originality and daring and for once Gaumont British has lighted a picture the way it should be.

Wini Shaw Stops Show.

The stage bill this week also is one of uncommon worth. It is opened by the Radio City Music Hall Glee Club, as an adjunct to the orchestral overture conducted by Miss Vin Lindhe, and closed by the same organization in a comedy skit called "The Barbershop Choir." Both vocal interludes, as well as the overture, were applauded to the echo, as the saying is.

The first of the vaudeville acts introduced by the seasonably gowned Miss Sieber was the Honey Family of gymnasts, three girls and three men, in another exhibition of their surprising feats. They were followed at yesterday's first performance by Freddie Craig, jr., "the lad with the index mind," who does uncanny things with chalk on a stageful of blackboards, much to everybody's amazement and sympathetic mental fatigue. Gine, DeQuincy and Lewis are next in their burlesque adagio dance and score their usual hit.

At this point, Miss Sieber introduces Wini Shaw, the stage and cinematic canary, who proceeds to tie things up, almost to the point where they can't be started again, with "Lullaby of Broadway," "Why Must I Always Sing a Torch Song"—or something like that—and "Save Me Sister," which she sang in Al Jolson's picture of "The Singing Kid," almost a whole production in itself. The song, of course. What I mean to say is that Miss Shaw stopped the show.

A short-reel subject on golf and the Paramount News supplement a bill that is unequivocally recommended as A-1, early-summer entertainment.

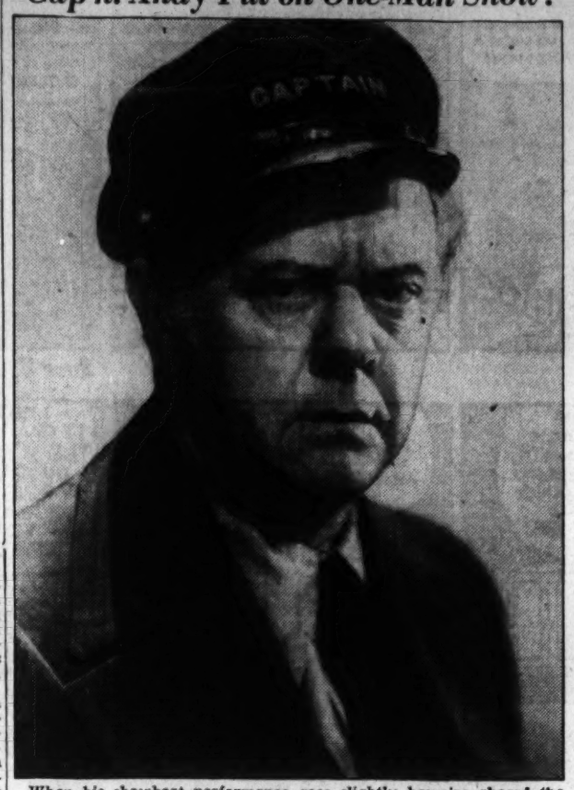
Cap'n. Andy Put on One-Man Show!



When his showboat performance goes slightly haywire aboard the Cotton Blossom, Capt. Andy Hawks leaps into the breach and enacts every character in the play, single-handed, in one of the most amusing scenes the screen has reflected in many a month. It was he, it will be remembered, who created the role of Capt. Andy in the original Ziegfeld stage production of the Edna Ferber story of the Mississippi. The new Universal picturization of "Show Boat" now is in its second capacity week at the RKO-Keith Theater, with Irene Dunne starred.

Loew's Fox

"TILL WE MEET AGAIN." Paramount picturization of a play by Alfred Davis, adapted by Morton Barteaux, with screen play by Edwin Justin Mayer, starring Herbert Marshall, supported by Gertrude Michael, Lionel Atwill, Rod LaRocque, Guy Bates Post and Julia Faye. Directed by Robert Florey. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

Another spy picture, this, but somehow it is more interesting, more adult and believable than most.

Alen Barclow, English actor, and Elsa Duryani, Viennese actress, are parted the night before their wedding by England's declaration of war against Germany. They hope desperately to meet again and yet, when they do, it is most disastrous—yes, you've guessed it, Alan is a British spy and Elsa, a German.

To give any more than that very simple outline would be unfair to the excellent suspense built up by twists and turns and unexpected developments in the well-paced, though hackneyed plot.

The chief merit of the picture is its realism. Its spies are real and human people, not theatrical puppets, their emotions are not eternally held in check by love of country, the methods of detection and of evading detection which they use seem quite logical and possible, the secrets they discover are secrets that were discovered in the World War—the Germans gain knowledge of the British tank before it takes the field; the Allies locate the mysterious Big Bertha that is shelling Paris. And praise be, there is never any question here as to Elsa's loyalty to lover or to country when she and Alen do meet again. It may not be noble, but it is very satisfying that she should choose Alen so instantly that there really is no choice about it.

Leads Play Effectively.

Herbert Marshall, when once past the inane "smart dialogue" of the opening scene, gives another of his quiet, sincere and very effective performance.

Together the two are so sympathetic that the rather implausable happy ending is almost obligatory.

This ending, the well-worn spy theme, and a strangely missed opportunity are the picture's faults. The missed opportunity? Well, Alen and Elsa are actors and they are spies, so naturally their knowledge of make-up should came in handy at dangerous moments when they must elude pursuers. At least, that's what we thought, but it doesn't, not once. Even when Alen knows he is keeping a rendezvous that will mean death if caught, the extent of his disguise is a pair of horn-rimmed glasses; when they flee the country, Elsa wears a nurse's costume that frames her memorable face beautifully in a veil for all to see. The principal mystery about the film is, therefore why were they actors at all?

Rod LaRocque returns after a long absence (except for brief moments in "The Preview Murder") in a rather good performance as Carl Schrottle, Lionel Atwill keeps his lip from curling too much, and that familiar face of the nurse in the German hospital is Julia Faye of long ago. Robert Florey's direction is excellent.

Meroff on Stage.

On the stage, Master Benny Meroff and his organization (he calls it an orchestra, but we call it a bunch of zanies) operate on the circus, or three ring, principle. Nothing goes on by itself. If there is music, there is also clowning; if there is clowning, there is music; if there is singing, there is dancing and vice versa, and whatever there is, there is also Benny. He has little use for the subtleties. Of his offering, which makes up the entire stage show, we like best his nimble and clever sepia tapster, and Jeffrie Gill, who sings pleasantly but must find laughs aimed at stooges just a little disconcerting coming, as they do, as he hits his high notes. Somehow these everything-happening-at-once acts seem rather impolite.

Phil Lampkin steps out this week as a considerable impresario all in honor of King Cotton—it's national cotton week, you know—or will if you go to the Fox. Phil leads his boys through a "Salute to King Cotton" overture of Southern airs, with a swet voiced singer on the stage, a movie of Southern scenes, a sextet of peppy lassies throwing cotton puffs at the customers, and a cotton style show featuring Washington stores' fashions selected by the expert and charming Betty Garnett.

An Ernest Truex comedy and a newsreel, which begins the silly season with views of sweepstakes winners, complete the bill.

RKO-Keith's

"SHOW BOAT." Universal picturization of the operetta by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, based on the novel by Edna Ferber, starring Irene Dunne, with Allan Jones, Charles Winninger, Paul Robeson, Helen Morgan, Helen Westley, Donald Cook, Queenie Smith, Francis X. Mahoney, Charles Middleton, Sammy White, Arthur Hohl, J. Farrell MacDonald, Patricia Barry, Marilyn Knowlden, Sunnie O'Dea, Mae Beatty, Clarence Muse and Stanley Fields. Music by Jerome Kern. Screen play and lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein 2d. Directed by James Whale. Reviewed Friday afternoon (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

In 1926 the late Florenz Ziegfeld opened in Washington an operetta which was destined to become one of the greatest light musical works ever produced in these United States. Based on a "best seller," with music by Jerome Kern, and offered at a time when the cinema was getting used to its vocal chords, it was inevitable that 'Show Boat" should find its way to the screen. However successful that picture might have been, the real "Show Boat" did not tie up to the local boards until last week, when the second film version broke before an expectant public.

Superbly produced, admirably cast and excellently performed and sung, the present version, abetted by technical developments of nearly a decade, becomes one of the greatest pictures of its kind ever made. An exceptionally strong story for an operetta, and with certain changes in the original novel to add even greater dramatic power to the picture, "Show Boat" presents a work of beauty, grace and charm, performed with uncommonly repressed enthusiasm, and with the vocal numbers rendered in perfect harmony with the situation where they are introduced.

One cannot at this time devote great space to the many, many laudabe qualities of this picture. It is one of those rare occasions in the theater when the enthusiasm of expectancy is far exceeded by the enthusiasm of experience. Whatever one may have conjured up as possibilities will assuredly be realized by this picture.

A new release of the Pathe News is the single auxiliary offering.

"A MESSAGE TO GARCIA." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the brochure by the late Elbert Hubbard, adapted to the screen by W. P. Lipscomb and Gene Fowler, featuring John Boles, Barbara Stanwyck and Wallace Beery, with Alan Hale, Herbert Mundin, Mona Barrie, Enrique Acosta, Juan Torena and Blanca Vischer. Directed by George Marshall. Reviewed Friday evening (repeat engagement) by Sally Stroud.

Wallace Beery, playing his usual boisterously dishonest, ne'er-do-well role, is the chief attraction in this story made from the Hubbard essay and the Rowan book. He is the "innocent patriot" who sells sawdust-filled cartridges to Cubans and Spanish alike, who assists the hero through the Cuban jungles with his precious message for the rebel leader, who mugs at the camera and carries the audience-interest around in one grimy pocket.

John Boles is the West Pointer delegated for the perilous quest by the President of the United States. It was his order to get the message to Garcia, hemmed-in in the wild Cuban jungles with the remnants of his insurrectionist army. Thrown upon his own resources, he befriends Beery, who saved him from death, picked his pockets and swore he alone could tell him of the man who knew a man who could take him to Garcia.

The love interest (Barbara Stanwyck, in strikingly unbecoming make-up and nary a trace of accent) is a Cuban girl whose brother is Garcia's right-hand man. She and Beery together manage to get Boles to Garcia after hazardous incidents, laughable and tragic.

He Could Take It!

One good brief flash is the scene where the Cuban patriot (Barbara's father) refuses a blindfold as he faces the firing squad of the Spanish. Boles is capable; Alan Hale, as the spy, is sufficiently suave; Stanwyck is impassive, even when a bullet is gouged out of her knee with a knife, and Beery is his traditional amusing self.

Tom Howard and George Shelton star in a Tuxedo comedy which is all about how two innocents make $300 expand to one grand. Vincent Lopez's orchestra is featured in a Dave Fleischer cartoon which has a novel idea in newsreels, being a neat burlesque of the usual run.

In the newsreel proper you may see the President addressing the safety patrol representatives, a new death-ray for insect extermination, the ravaging New Jersey game preserve fire. Brevity at Belmont Park and the first of a summer-long trek of divers and swimmers.

"ECSTASY." Eureka release of the Slavia-Films production, featuring Hedy Kiesler, supported by Jaromir Rogoz, Aribert Mog and Leopold Kramer. Music and lyrics by Kola Jozsef. Hadja Imre. Henry Gershwin and William Colligan. English dialogue by Jacques A. Koerpel. Directed by Gustav Machaty. Reviewed (sixth week) by W. A. Whitney.

"Ecstasy" . . . Hedy Kiesler . . . sixth week. What is there left to say which will attest more significantly the merits of this Czechoslovakian production which is now, or shortly will be, in complete possession of all cinema records in the City of Washington.

Six-week runs are such rarities that when one does come along, the picture thus honored must, of necessity, possess something of intense public appeal. "Ecstasy" has that particular something, beyond excellent acting, superb direction and exquisite photography.

The supporting program is diversified and entertaining.

Rising Yangtze River Brings Disaster Fear

Hankow, China, May 28 (AP).—A steady and abnormal rise of the Yangtze River tonight created fears of another flood disaster. The river overflowed the tops of dikes above Hankow, inundating several villages and drowning cattle. There was extreme anxiety in Hupeh districts along the Yantze and Han Rivers where embankments were disintegrating under the force of the floodwaters.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Dawn Patrol.

Jack Johnson is around Broadway . . . The former heavyweight champion refuses to back down on his caustic opinion of Joe Louis . . . Auto Tycoon Walter Chrysler took Johnson to task for his slighting opinions . . . "Jiminelly, Mr. Chrysler," said Johnson, "you are an auto engineer. You know better than me that a car must have balance to purr along right. It happens that I know boxing, have made a study of it for years. I say that Joe Louis lacks boxing balance, that his stance is dead wrong, and that the first boxer who moves to Louis' left will beat him. Go over to Madison Square Garden and look at the pictures of Jim Corbett, Joe Gans, Bob Fitzsimmons—and compare their stances to the position of Joe Louis—you'll see what I mean. Tunney beat Dempsey, by moving to the left of Dempsey—that is the way Louis will be beaten, and when it happens, you'll all see that old Jack Johnson was right. I made a lot of mistakes, sure enough, but I never made a mistake about boxing, no suh."

Connie Boswell.

• • •

Nick Lucas, last of the troubadours, is still twanging his guitar and rating handsome weekly checks for it . . . He is an Italian lad from Jersey, and is prouder of his spaghetti cooking than of his crooning . . . Quite a few of the professionals of the stage are secretly convinced that they would have made Oscar, of the Waldorf, a tyro over a cook stove . . . Curiously enough, all of the pros excel at the preparation of spaghetti.

• • • •

Strange to see Bill Gaxton around town without Victor Moore . . . This was a stage partnership of five years standing, temporarily dissolved when Moore went West for the next Astaire release . . . In the meantime, Gaxton has been sunning himself near third base at the local ball parks, dining at night with Bob Hague . . . Rags-to-riches career of Benny Fields, Milwaukee minstrel, climaxes with his appearance at Loew's State . . . Frances Williams, another of the season's comebacks, already is dickering with Warner's . . . Fox convention and the Guy Lombardo opening at the Palmer House call quite a few Broadwayites to Chicago . . . Truman Talley, John Clark, Laurence Stallings, Joe Pincus, Lou Irwin, Harry Fink and Bob Taplinger are hopping the rattlers.

Nothing in town so attention-arresting as the dancing team of Charlotte Lamberton and her brother . . . The girl is the most stunning looker in this town of ours . . . The brother is a tall, fine looking youngster . . . Both are red-headed . . . Both are deaf, the boy completely mute, the girl able to phrase a few words . . . They dance in perfect tempo, looking only to the bandleader to time their finish . . . They come from Los Angeles. When Charlotte arrived she danced solo . . . Her success persuaded her to bring on her brother, and now they dance together, and the girl is no longer lonely.

• • • •

The handicap of deaf-muteness will cost the girl a ton of movie gold, for her unusual beauty would chase most of the movie heroines to the tall woods . . . She is a Janet Gaynor type, but more beautiful the type of beauty that impresses you more the longer you stare . . . Connie Boswell is another great talent denied a logical celluloid outlet because she is crippled . . . Here is one of the grander voices . . . Phil Harris suggests that the movie lots could employ her to dub in songs for those flickeraves who can't sing . . . That would make movie-going a pleasure.

• • • •

Peg-Leg Bates, adopted by this column some time ago, is the only one who turned the handicap into a positive asset . . . He is the dancingest man of the profession, and when he appears in vaudeville he tears houses down . . . "I don't want no sympathy," he sings on his first entrance . . . "Judge me as though I had two laigs" . . . Then proceeds to startle the audience with kicks, leaps and taps that a centipede couldn't equal . . . He's over in England now, a tremendous success.

• • • •

Ben Marden's Riviera girls are the toast of the town . . . For the first time since Ziegfeld's days, the beauties in a line of showgirls actually ran off with the critical notices . . . The headliners of the show were submerged by the lookers, and there is considerable feeling about it on the far bank of the Hudson . . . Most of the girls are newcomers.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

The Young Democrats of the District and their fellow Government workers in Washington are all agog. The D. C. Division is "doing a show," which will be presented Wednesday through Saturday at the National Theater.

BAKER.

"Kapital Kapers" is the title of this fast-moving 24-scene musical revue, which, incidentally, is the first project of the newly elected officers, headed by J. Raymond Nunan, PWA.

Mr. Nunan takes a prominent part in the musical and will be seen in the scene "The Awakening." This act will be followed by the finale—"Young Democrats on Parade."

The opening chorus contains such familiar names in Government circles as Margaret Robertson, Resettlement; Lorna Stewart, Agriculture; Dorothy Thomas, RFC; Rose Weiss, HOLC; Constance Gregory, WPA, and the following from FHA: Lois Isabel, Helen Turner, Majel Kehoe, Lucy Lennox, Bebe Lahna and Mary Lou Bonham. Other members of the chorus are Vera Dunlap, Commerce; Alice Cogswell, Democratic National Committee; Ruth Hargrave, Jean Pauly and Beverly Kehoe, WPA; Gladys Goerringer, Betty Connely and Hazel Schmidt, FHA.

Among the principals are Orma Ewing, daughter of the Democratic National Committeeman from Utah, and Arthur Cornwall, House Office Building, who will sing the introduction to the peacock number. S. Carlton Ayres, Resettlement, will share the lead with Marion Venable, dancer, in "You Get a Friend" number. Regina Hope, Interior, as "chairman," will introduce "Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Hoover" in the "Scouting Rumor" sketch set at a Girl Scout meeting of the First Ladies.

Jack Collins, FHA, and Charles Dixon, General Accounting Office, will herald the "Last of Minnie the Moocher." Freida Hootman, FHA, will be the object of the adagio throwers.

Lucille Foster McMillin (F), Civil Service Commissioner, will speak this morning at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., on "The Progress of Women in Government."

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F, P or C follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 12 and 2 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Benny Meroff and his orchestra and other acts; screen, Herbert Marshall in "Till We Meet Again"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Ronald Colman and Claudette Colbert in "Under Two Flags"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Paul Cavanaugh in "Champagne Charlie").

Today we turn from toil and paths well trod
To honor those who sleep—life's duty done
Beneath those rugged oaks—that verdant sod—
Upon the check-rowed slopes of Arlington.

There sleep the heroes of our Nation's arms—
Without regard to races or to creeds,
Alike are honored for heroic deeds.

Theirs was a sacrifice which knew one bound—
A grateful nation ever will recall
And may we who now serve ever be found
Worthy the trust of those who gave their all.
F. C. (P), Agriculture.

Engineer and Mechanic Jobs.

Applications will be received until June 16 for the positions of aircraft mechanic, general, and for helper. The rate of pay for aircraft mechanic, general, ranges from 93 cents to $1.05 an hour for a 40-hour week.

For helper, aircraft mechanic, general, the pay range is from 55 to 67 cents an hour for a 40-hour week. The salary in each case is subject to a deduction of 3½ per cent toward a retirement annuity.

Competitors will be rated on their experience and fitness. Applicants for the positions of aircraft mechanic, general, must have completed a 4-year apprenticeship in the trade, or have had four years of practical experience, the substantial equivalent of such completed apprenticeship. Applicants for the position of helper, aircraft mechanic, general, must have had at least six months' experience.

Applications will be received until June 16 for the position of student engineer. Optional subjects are chemical, civil and highway, electrical and mechanical. The usual entrance salary for this position is $1,440, less a deduction of 3½ per cent toward a retirement annuity.

Competitors will be rated on practical questions in the optional subject chosen and in supporting subjects. Applicants must have completed at least 3 years of an engineering course in an engineering college of recognized standing, provided that none may enter the examination who have completed the required 3 years' college work prior to May of 1933. Applicants must not havereached their twenty-fifth birthday on the date of the close of receipt of applications.

These positions are largely seasonal in nature and those employed may be furloughed at the end of the construction season, but if their service has been satisfactory, they may be re-employed the following season without a further examination.

Additional information on these and other examinations my be obtained from Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

H. B. Barnhart Retires.

Retiring after 34 years' service, Herman B. Barnhart, chief copy editor, Government Printing Office, was honored by his fellow workers yesterday with presentation of a traveling bag and other farewell gifts.

Mr. Barnhart was appointed from Crawfordsville, Ind., and served under seven public printers. Entering the service as a compositor, he was appointed superintendent of printing in 1927, serving in this position until 1933.

He was chairman of the G. P. O. Style Board, in which position he guided, to a large degress, the typography of Government publications in the past few years.

Dorothy Sebastian Wins Divorce at Los Angeles

Los Angeles, May 29 (AP).—Dorothy Sebastian added her name to the list of movie colony divorcees today when she appeared in court and had her marriage to Bill Boyd, cowboy actor, dissolved. She charged cruelty.

She testified Boyd had a habit of departing from home without notice. When he returned, she said, he never offered an explanation nor would he supply one if she asked.
